

Home Folks Accord Beloved, Departed President Harding Final Impressive Honors As Entire Sorrowing Nation Bows In Reverent Tribute

Thousands View Body At Harding Home

MARION, OHIO, August 10. (By United Press)—His own homefolks today accorded simple, final funeral honors to President Warren G. Harding here.

Not with crashing volleys and the wailing notes of "taps," but with the old-fashioned, homely ceremonies that might be accorded any leading citizen of Marion, the twenty-ninth President of the United States was laid to rest by his fellow-townsmen.

It was a home funeral, attended by the home folks of Marion and of Washington and of nearly every state in the union. The tribute paid today by thousands was a tribute to Harding, the citizen and friend, not to Harding the President.

All morning as the body lay in state in the home of his father, Dr. George T. Harding, on East Center street, a continuous file of people passed through the house, past the simple bier and out again on to the street. Militiamen guided the throngs of citizens, eager to pay their last respects to Warren Harding.

In preparation for the funeral all the downtown streets and State street, leading to the cemetery, were freed from motor and street-car traffic. Only official cars of President Coolidge's party or those directly connected with the funeral, were permitted in cars on those streets. Yet at the expressed wish of Mrs. Harding, everybody had a chance to pass through the house and view the body.

The new President, the Secretary of State, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and many other dignitaries joined with Mr. Harding's friends and associates in paying farewell respects.

In the final act of the great national drama, which started at San Francisco and extended across the continent, the body was to be carried in a hearse to Marion Cemetery and placed in a receiving vault.

The setting was one of the most remarkable in history for the funeral of the Chief of State of a great nation. The center of it was an old two-story and cupola house on a shady thoroughfare, with trim lawns, and little cottages sitting side by side with the larger dwellings of the first families.

The end of the trail was a beautiful cemetery on the south edge of town.

In front of the house a long line of people filed slowly in, while militiamen stood by. The guards were strung all around the house, and there were some at the rear gate into the back yard, an enclosure overgrown with grass, where barnyard fowls strutted. Streamers of white and black crepe hung from the occasional lamp posts in East Center street, near the front of the house.

The sympathy of the town—and of the nation—went out to the two chief mourners, Mrs. Harding, stoically preserving her courage through it all, and the President's aged father, Dr. George T. Harding, who was so shocked by his son's death that it was impossible for him to walk without support.

While the unending column was passing the casket, more than fifty automobiles were forming in line in the street for the procession to the cemetery. The home was to be closed at 1 o'clock, after which the widow was to look on her husband's face for the last time. Then, the trip to the cemetery.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the Harding home was closed to visitors, and at 2 o'clock the procession of automobiles, lined up for blocks to the east of Dr. Harding's home, began to form.

Every effort was made at the cemetery to give everybody a chance to hear the simple services. Soldiers directed automobiles through the winding roadways, unloaded them, and sent them outside the cemetery again. The funeral procession from the house to the cemetery was as follows:

The Rev. George M. Landis, Baptist, and the Rev. Jesse Swank, Methodist, officiating clergymen.
Mrs. Harding, Presidential Secretary Christian and General Sawyer.
Mr. and Mrs. George T. Harding, Sr., and Jr. (father and brother of the President), and Charles Harding and Mary Elizabeth Harding, nephew and niece of the President.
Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Rensberg.
Mr. and Mrs. Heber Votaw, Misses Rensberg, George VanFleet and Mrs. Briggs.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. King (Mrs. Harding's brother and sister-in-law)
Rescoe E. Matzger and family.
Dr. and Mrs. Boone, Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, Judson Welliver.
President Coolidge, Chief Justice Taft, Secretary Hughes and Speaker Gillett.

Secretaries Woods and Mellon, Attorney-General Daugherty and Postmaster General New.

Secretaries Denby, Work, Wallace and Hoover.
Senator Cummins, President pro tem of the Senate, and Governor Donahoe, of Ohio.

There were 50 other cars in line carrying officials, home-town mourners and newspaper correspondents.

After the ceremony at the vault, unmarked by any signs of high office except for six temporary white pillars surmounted by eagles, a guard of troops was to be left behind to watch over the body of the President.

MARION, O., Aug. 10. (By Associated Press).—The day when human eyes would look their last on the face of Warren Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, dawned with many who loved him and his home, long way of his still waiting to pass slowly beside the bier, resting in his father's home. Before the shadows of evening stole across the wide peaceful field of the town of Warren, Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, his home, long way of his still waiting to pass slowly beside the bier, resting in his father's home.

Harding's Ambition Achieved In Death

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Special Wireless Dispatch To The Portsmouth Times)
(Copyright 1923)

BOARD THE S. S. LEVI
ATHIAN, Aug. 10.—Warren

Harding has achieved in death that which was his life's ambition. He wanted to be loved by the American people. Their affection spontaneously given, their applause for kindness and good will rather than their passing esteem on complex policies of state—these he sought as the highest reward of a plain man's endeavor to be righteous.

Returning Americans bring back alike tales of respectful tributes spoken by people high and low in the European world. There is a universal note to the eulogies of all German flags fly at half mast in Berlin today. The French press extols the kindness and fairness of the dead president. Could Warren Harding have wished for more?

Somehow it seems the irony of fate in American political life that these expressions of good will and appreciation of a conscientious man come after death has adjourned his public career. The same eulogies expressed ten days ago would have been suspected of partisan purpose or factional strategy.

Only those who knew Warren Harding intimately can bear testimony today to the wholeness that pervaded his personality. Cheerful almost always, smiling even when political perils were subtracting every now and then a friend, there was a stoical spirit of resignation to fate in his moods recently that suggested faith in Providence which somehow would right things and make all men better and better. His was an influence of calmness, conciliation and incessant effort to win antagonists by kind words of compromise.

White House Has Tragic History

By ROBT. T. SMALL

WASHINGTON, August 10.—A flag hung limply at half mast on the White House today. Overhead the sky was leaden. A few curious persons idled in and out of the driveway and walked under the great portico of the White House gates still are open.

The home of the Presidents, stately and serene, has never appeared more immaculate. It was being painted and polished for a season of wonderful gaiety—for the Hardings liked that sort of thing. But now for a period it must be a house of official mourning. There yet remains the saddest of tasks to be faced by the widow of the dead President—the gathering together of the many little personal belongings of the departed: the packing of her own trinkets and "possessions"; the final move away from the White House to make room for the new first family of the land.

The old White House has seen a world of joyousness and sorrow. Within its mute walls there has been every human emotion. The gamut has been run not once but many times. The mansion is about to unfold another happier American family. It is about to know young folks again, the first boys since Charles Tift romped through the halls and chambers as the Roosevelt boys had romped before him. The two Coolidge lads are not of the same temperament however, as the Roosevelt and Taft boys. They are rather solemn of mind, like their illustrious father. They seem to have inherited little if any of the vivacity and warmth of feeling of their mother.

The nation that has paused in sorrow at the death of Warren Harding, is praying today that the new White House family may drink only of the cup of happiness while fate holds them within the White House portals.

No White House family in decades had been quite so much alone as the Hardings. Their union was not blessed with children. The relatives who occasionally visited them were grown ups. Two little grand children of Mrs. Harding, offsprings of her first marriage, will be at the cemetery in Marion Friday afternoon. They never came to Washington.

During the last quarter of a century the White House has had a particularly tragic history. It is a quarter of a century of varied memories in the older attaches like Rudolph Foster, executive clerk, who has been there since McKinley took the first oath of office. Cleveland's last administration had been a happy one. He had married in the White House and baby Ruth was born there.

For four years Major McKinley also was happy. It is true his wife was an invalid and she was unable to entertain very much, but her President-husband always was with her and their life was pitched on a high plane of domestic felicity.

Fear Ship Wrecked

PANAMA CANAL, August 10.—Shipping circles here fear that the American tanker Swift Star, bound from San Pedro, Cal., to Fall River, Mass., with a cargo of crude oil, has been lost at sea, with her crew of 30 men. Drifting wreckage, marked with the vessel's name, was found by mariners off San Andres Island, 250 miles north of Colon, while fishing boats from that island report that damaged life boats were seen drifting off the coast on July 22. The fishermen also found the body of a man. The sea for some distance around was all-stained. The vessel passed through the Panama Canal July 12. Shipping records show that the tanker Swift Star has not been heard from since she left the canal. The ship left San Pedro for Fall River on June 30. She carried 100,000 barrels of crude oil.

Coolidge To Attend Services

ABOARD PRESIDENTIAL TRAIN, August 10.—President Coolidge and representatives of official Washington today were pressing on toward Marion to take final farewell of Warren Harding this afternoon. The President and his entourage expected to reach their destination at 1:30 p.m.

Bound for the grave of his late chief, the new President let it be known as soon as he stepped aboard his special Washington train last night that he would not appear on the platform of his observation car on the journey to Marion, nor will he permit photographers to snap him en route.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—first stop—was reached at midnight. Mr. Coolidge and the rest of his party, Chief Justice Taft, General Pershing, members of Congress, Governors and ranking officers of the three arms of the service retired soon after the capital had been left behind.

The train moved quietly out of Washington on a dash to Marion, but before Martinsburg had been reached it was decided to cut speed so that it would not arrive until one hour and a half before the final services, leaving to Marion its own dead as it goes as possible.

Before retiring, Mr. Coolidge received in his private car a few Senators, including Spencer, of Missouri, who dropped in to pay their respects. John T. Adams, Chairman of the Republican Committee, boarded the train at the last minute.

Nation Pays A Tribute Of Silence

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(By the A. P.)—The nation paid the tribute of silence to Warren G. Harding as his body was entombed today at Marion.

From coast to coast and from border to border every wheel of the federal government and practically every one of industry and of commerce stood still. Theatres and other amusement places were closed, baseball games postponed and other events of sport deferred.

As recommended by President Coolidge in his proclamation officially announcing the death of the late President, the day was one of mourning and of prayer. Thousands upon thousands gathered in their places of worship for services as myriad church bells tolled their mournful message of a beloved chieftain laid to his last rest.

These services were not confined to land or to America. On sea, on great passenger liners, flying the American and other flags, prayers were said in a number of foreign lands.

President Coolidge did not proclaim this day a national holiday as it was not his purpose to recommend a stoppage of industry; preferring rather to leave each individual concern their choice in the method by which it would pay a last tribute to the dead. In many states, however, a state holiday was proclaimed and in these all banks were closed. In those states where national banks could not close under the law the transaction of only urgent business was urged.

In many sections, mines, factories, shipyard and places of business generally were closed throughout the day. In others there was cessation of work at the burial hour.

Traffic on all the railroads came to a halt at the hour of entombment, trains grinding to a stop wherever

Prayer Delivered At Harding's Entombment

MARION, OHIO, August 10. (By the Associated Press).—Dr. Jesse Swank, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church, of which Mrs. Harding is a member, delivered the following prayer at the cemetery:

"Almighty God, father of our Lord Jesus Christ, giver of every good and perfect gift, the father of the lights, in whom there is no variableness or shadow of turning, we come with confidence to Thee even in such a time as this because we know that Thou art not only a God of greatness and power, but also a God of mercy and of love.

"We thank Thee for our land and nation and for Thy guiding hand upon it from its inception until this hour. We thank Thee for what this man, our friend and brother, has meant in the progress and development of our nation. We feel that he is in imitation of Him whom he called Master and Lord has laid down his life in the service of his country and we believe that he has received Thy well done."

"May Thy blessing rest upon him who assumes the vast responsibility of taking the helm and guiding the future of this land of ours. May Thy blessing rest upon our nation and its people and upon our city in this time of great bereavement. Give Thy blessing to the aged father, who offered his own life in the service of his country and now has given this noble son. Sustain and support him in this great trial and sorrow and guide his feet in the paths of peace until his way shall end in the land beyond the grave where he can meet again the dear ones whom he has loved long since and lost a while. Bless the other members of the family and may they feel Thee near. May Thy special blessing rest upon Mrs. Harding, the wife of our loved one, who lives to mourn the loss of this devoted companion who journeyed with her up the steps of life until they reached the heights together. May she now hear Thee say 'fear not thou for I am with thee; be not dismayed for I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right arm of My righteousness.' May she know that the eternal God is her refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms."

"When these solemn rites are over and she goes back to walk the way of life alone, may she realize that she is not alone, for Thou hast said to all Thy children: 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee' and may her noble example of confidence and trust in God be an inspiration to all those who are called to walk with her 'in dolorous.'"

"May the peace of God descend upon all hearts and may we all learn to live, not for ourselves, but for each other, and for the good that we may do, as did this noble man and woman."

Electricity Transmitted in Water.

A European inventor, it is reported, uses a column of water instead of an electric wire to transmit electric power. The current passes through the water with the same facility whether the water is in motion or stationary, and can be delivered at any desired frequency or in more than one phase. Used for drilling granite in Cornwall, England, the special tools designed for the water wave impulses deliver 80 per cent of the generated power, whereas the compressed air tools deliver only 10 per cent.

Colors Worn by Jockeys.
There are records to show that King Henry VIII as early as 1530 dressed his jockeys in colors—but nothing to prove that the colors were always the same. In 1702 the Jockey club passed a notice to the effect that several owners of racing horses had selected colors to be worn by their jockeys. Some of the colors chosen then are still in use by the same families.

Examination For Teachers

The final teachers' examination of the school year will be held in the High School building, Monday, August 27, 1923. All Portsmouth teachers who do not hold certificates for the year 1922-23 should present themselves at 8 a. m. on this date.

HARDING MEMORIAL THIS AFTERNOON

Thousands of Portsmouth citizens are expected to attend the memorial services in honor of the late President Warren G. Harding, which are scheduled to be held in Mound Park this afternoon.

Those who attend will leave behind all thought of work or of play, considering only the solemnity of the occasion and the bereavement of the nation. In tribute to him, the leader of his republic and their republic, who was called from his people in the day of his greatest power and influence, all shops, factories, offices, and stores in Portsmouth will be closed during the services.

Simplicity is to mark the service. Every detail has been made as nearly as possible similar to the arrangements made in Marion. The complete absence of pomp and flourish will lend a beauty and grace symbolic of the unpretentiousness of the life and deeds of the loved president. The program schedule is as follows:

The Memorial choir will meet on the steps of the Highland avenue school building and march to the scene of the services at 2:30, taking their places in the seats reserved for them.

At 2:45 the River City Band, which volunteered its services as a mark of respect to President Harding who was once a member of the Marion band, will play appropriate selections.

Promptly at three o'clock, at the same time that the last rites are being conducted at the cemetery at Marion, the band will play "America." The entire assemblage, choir and audience will join in singing the expressional hymn.

Rev. Louis N. Kayser, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, the denomination to which President Harding subscribed, will pronounce the invocation.

"Lead Kindly Light," one of the two favorites of the last president which were sung both at the national services in Washington and at the home services in Marion, will be given by a special choir.

Following with will come the address of Rev. Hugh Ivan Evans, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, "Warren G. Harding, Christian Gentleman."

"Nearer My God to Thee," the second of the favorites rendered by the special choir, will come next on the program.

"Warren G. Harding, True American," will be the subject of the address given by Vallee Harold, editor of The Times.

The Presidential salute of 21 guns will follow the concluding speech. Portsmouth's National Guard units will be in charge of this part of the program.

Taps will be sounded by the American Legion Bugle Corps, after which the band will play "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Concluding the services was the flag honor, when Old Glory will be returned to the top of the mast, signifying the nation's determination to "carry on" in the true spirit of the departed chief.

On the speakers' stand are to be seated Mayor Gabbeman, who presided as Chairman, the special chorus, members of Bailey Post, G. A. R., and the ministers and laymen participating in the program.

The platform has been draped with a flag that had been used in similar memorial services in honor of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley.

The special choir is composed of the following members: Soprano—Mrs. Mae Lynn, Mrs. O. J. Deitzler, Mrs. Martin McElahan and Mrs. J. B. Brooks.

Contralto—Mrs. James Breese, Mrs. Charles Storck, Mrs. Clarence Noddy and Miss Pearl Monagan.

Tenor—Fred Lorey, Elmer Fetter, Chester Riggles and Edmund Kriker. Bass—Clyde Knost, William H. Schwartz, Talmadge Edwards and W. C. Howland.

Coolidge's Sons Hard at Work

Calvin Coolidge Jr. and John Coolidge

When President Coolidge went to Washington to take up the reins of government his two sons did not accompany him. One, Calvin, Jr., aged 14, is shown here holding some of the tobacco leaves he has just plucked on the Dickinson & Day farm, at Hadfield, Mass., where he is working this summer at $8.50 a day. He puts in full nine hours daily under a hot sun, attired in khaki breeches, old shirt and well-worn shoes. His employers didn't know who he was until after his father took the oath of office. Mr. Coolidge's other son, John, aged 10, is a buck private in the Citizens Military Training Corps, at Camp Devens, Mass.

A sample of what the West Union school band can do when it comes to furnishing music was demonstrated this morning when 38 members of the band visited Portsmouth and gave short concerts before going to the Louisville Fair grounds where they were to furnish music all day.

The band made up entirely of public school pupils, grade and high school, of West Union, has a full strength of about 60 and it will be the complete band that goes to the Ohio State Fair this year on a $3,000 contract, for three days' work. The band has a splendid record and West Union can well be proud of the young people who form the organization.

In addition to their regular uniform of blue the band will have second uniform when they play at Columbus. The new uniform consists of white trousers and caps and with green coats for the boys and white skirts and caps with green waistcoats for the girls.

The band arrived here this morning by automobile making their trip via Blue Creek, Wamsley and Orway. They left their machines on Front street, formed in parade formation and marched to the Times office where several selections were played. The band also showed their drilling ability by forming at the sound of the drum major's whistle the two letters "W. U."

J. D. Naylor is leader of the band. C. C. Nixon of the high school faculty assisted in playing the lead horn.

F. R. Edgington, well known business man of West Union, is one of the citizens interested in the progress of the band and he accompanied them here.

From the Times office the band marched to Gallia Square where a short concert was given after which they went to the fair grounds.

The band played last year at Cedar Point during a Masonic centennial, a Kentucky delegation engaging the band for the trip.

American To Climb Tall Peak In Alps; To Use New Oxygen

GENEVA, August 10.—(By Associated Press)—Brigadier General Charles G. Bruce, leader of last year's British expedition for the conquest of Mount Everest left Champery yesterday, accompanied by the American Alpinist Henry Fairbanks-Montagnier, of Terre Haute, Ind., to experiment in the ascent to the highest peaks of the Alps in Valais, Canton, with a new oxygen apparatus. The apparatus will be employed in another attempt to reach the top of Mount Everest next year.

General Bruce is the guest of Mr. Montagnier at the Chalet in Champery where the Indiana climber has lived for several years.

Scientists Find Soapstone Canoe

SANTA BARBARA, CAL., Aug. 10.—Investigators of the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, led by J. P. Harrington have unearthed in an ancient grave on Burton's mound in this city the proof of what was once a soapstone canoe. The find is said to be unique in the history of American archeological research, and indicates, in the opinion of the scientists, stoneware boats were used by the ancient aborigines of this district.

Grand Jury Starts Probe Of Promised Wall Street Expose

NEW YORK, August 10.—(By Associated Press)—The Federal Grand Jury has started to work in the E. M. Fuller, and the W. Frank McGee confessions, which promise to reveal the inside operations of the E. M. Fuller and Company brokerage house, which failed for $6,000,000 and to involve a number of prominent persons.

Several witnesses, whose testimony was based on the revelations of Fuller and McGee were introduced by U. S. Attorney Hayward, who predicted there would be developments Monday. He further indicated that 15,000 or more creditors among the bankrupt firm's customers would learn that there would be small chance of their cashing in upon the revelations of the racketeers.

Belgian Premier Takes Steps To Halt Decline Of France

BRUSSELS, Aug. 10.—(By the A. P.)—Premier Thoms today served notice on all bankers and brokers that if speculation in exchange continued strenuous restrictive measures would be taken, beginning with limitations of exchange transactions and eventually leading, if necessary, to the closing of the bourse.

The premier declares the decline in the Belgian franc is unjustified in view of the industrial prosperity of the country, the splendid crops, the favorable budget situation, and the diminution of the circulation. These factors, he contends, should favor a better rate for Belgian money.

Berlin Stores Protest.
BERLIN, Aug. 10.—(By the A. P.)—All the shops in Berlin with the exception of the provision stores closed today as a protest against the refusal of the authorities to allow prices to be fixed on a gold basis.

London, Aug. 9.—Information received in official quarters here from Berlin indicates that the Cuno government is likely to continue in power. The retail storekeepers, dismayed by the fall of the mark, are said to be preparing to close their shops tomorrow, but the government is regarded as strong enough to meet any emergency.

The inter-allied reparations commission has taken note of the new terrace is approaching the vanishing point so far as the actual effects are concerned.

The most welcome part of the speech was the chancellor's admission that the German government had nothing to expect from Great Britain in the way of sympathy or assistance. It is hoped this will mollify the French, who have been insisting that the present British policy is serving only to strengthen Germany's resistance.

Disappointed At Cuno.
BERLIN, August 10.—Chancellor Cuno's address to the Reichstag, in which he declared that passive resistance in the Ruhr in the Rhineland would continue to be supported by the nation, has been reported as the most depressing statement yet made to the national legislature by the present government. The coalition party regard it as a disappointing utterance.

Asserting that the British draft of the reply to the last German reparations note contained much that was impossible of fulfillment, Herr Cuno said it appeared England had gone extraordinarily far in her concessions to the French viewpoint.

Kerker's Remedy Brings Results After 10 Years of Suffering

"I can sleep now," is the joyous statement of Mrs. Carrie L. Smith, Darlington road, R. F. D., South Zanesville, O., for 10 years a hay fever sufferer, who owes her recovery to Kerker's Asthma and Hay Fever Remedy. She says: "I have suffered with hay fever for 10 years, every year during the rag-weed time. My eyes, nose and head bothered me something terrible. I tried various treatments but never got anything to bring real recovery and restful sleep until I took Kerker's Asthma and Hay Fever Remedy. One-half bottle put an end to my sneezing and I can lie down and sleep now. Had I known of the Kerker Remedy sooner I could have saved years of suffering." (Signed) "Carrie L. Smith," Darlington Road, South Zanesville, Ohio.

Economic Debacle Caused By Advice To Farmers

TOPEKA, Kans., August 10.—(By Associated Press)—Publicity urging farmers not to hold their wheat off the market has only tended to discourage them still more and bring an "economic debacle" which has gone to the point where it is cutting into the living standards of the farmers, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas declared in a letter sent today to R. A. Cooper, head of the federal farm loan board at Washington, from whose office, the senator said, such publicity had been coming.

"On my desk," wrote Senator Capper, "is a paper carrying a head four columns wide 'Farm loan board disapproves plan to store wheat on farms'. There has been a great deal of such publicity in the papers here.

"Cost of production figures this year are not available but it is probable they will be little, if any lower than for the crop of 1922, which was $1.35 a bushel. From this it is easy to see that wheat at 80 cents, and a huge amount of grain produced in Kansas this year has been sold for a smaller price than that, results in a net loss of 50 cents a bushel. Unless the market advances we have lost $50,000,000 on this year's crop in Kansas.

"Can you wonder that the producers of the middlewest are getting impatient with an economic system that apparently insists that food be sold for less than cost.

"Farmers had thought the intermediate credit banks would aid in building safeguards around the marketing of agricultural products which would help tide us through discouraging times. But there is nothing helpful that I can see in publicity which is in pounding down prices to a level far below the cost of production."

A nest of head lettuce, a ring of cottage cheese sprinkled with paprika and the whole encircled with potato chips, makes one very good reason for lunching at home. Use Derrill's Golden Crisp Potato Chips—far better than the ordinary kind.

OMAHA, August 9.—By Associated Press.—A conference between western railroad officials and members of a committee of Omaha business men will be held in Chicago next Monday on the committee's request for a 25 per cent emergency freight rate reduction on export wheat and flour, as a means of aiding the farmer, John L. Kennedy, the committee's chairman announced today.

Traffic Offenders Are Nabbed By Police; Warning Issued By Capt. Startzman

A quartet of traffic offenders were nabbed by the police last night and they will be required to meet charges in Municipal court Saturday morning by reason of the usual session of court being dispensed with Friday out of respect to the memory of the President, Warren G. Harding.

The names given by the men were Henry Hoston and Boyd Lewis, taken in tow for alleged reckless driving, and Charles Radloff and Oren Blair, charged with driving while intoxicated.

Lewis was apprehended by Officers Kennard and Hawkins at Fourteenth and Findlay streets yesterday afternoon and Hoston was later picked up on Walker street after the officers had pursued him several squares.

Radloff was taken into custody by Chief Startzman and Officer Amick, when they discovered him making a poor showing in guiding his machine along Tenth street, near Findlay, at a late hour last night. Blair was injured when the machine he was driving crashed into a machine owned by Alan N. Jordan, standing near the Jordan home on Fourth street at an early hour this morning. According to the police Blair was under the influence of liquor and a formal charge of driving while intoxicated, was placed against him.

Acting Chief Startzman today in commenting on the frequent arrests the past few days of persons for violating the traffic laws declared that the police were simply endeavoring to impress upon motorists the necessity of obeying the ordinance governing the operation of motor vehicles.

He said "that motorists must realize that, with the congested conditions of the streets of Portsmouth, reckless driving, speeding and driving while intoxicated are most serious offenses and can not and will not be tolerated," adding "that all offenders will be vigorously prosecuted in an effort to provide that degree of safety to the general public to which it is entitled."

There is always lively doing when these old time clubs and this year promises to be no exception to the rule and it will be a case of dog eat dog from the time hostilities start until the last shot is fired.

The Black Sox have been setting a fast pace of late and the Brush Creek gang is "all set" to give the athletes from the stone metropolis a mighty hot reception while Manager Simon and his comrades will march on the front line trench of the enemy with courage and confidence of capturing the invaded territory with a surprise attack which will carry them to victory.

"Hoss" Doctor Fined For Doping Harness Racer In Columbus

COLUMBUS, August 10.—(By Associated Press)—Dr. M. W. Price, veterinary surgeon of Richmond, Va., was fined $100 and costs yesterday when found guilty in the court of Squire Sandridge, of Obez for aiding and abetting in the administration of "doped" sugar to race horses during the grand circuit meeting here in July. It was charged that he had given a lump of sugar containing poison to Persiscope, trotting mare owned by J. L. Dodge.

Following the sentence, another charge of administering narcotics to Arnold Frisco, Pittsburgh owned trotter during the shortship races at Beulah Park, near here, in July was filed against Price. It was alleged that he induced Mrs. W. P. Haas wife of the owner to feed the horse the sugar, without knowing that it contained poison.

Testimony yesterday developed that Price had operated at several other tracks in Ohio and that he had been at Kalamazoo, Mich. Four other men are under arrest on similar charges.

Whitfield Enters Upon His Life Term in Ohio Prison

COLUMBUS, August 10.—(By Associated Press)—John L. Whitfield, murderer of Paul Simon, tennis player, in Cleveland, arrived at Ohio Penitentiary at 2:30 yesterday to begin his life sentence imposed after a jury had found him guilty of first degree murder yesterday, but recommended mercy.

A crowd of approximately 150 curious persons gathered at Union Station and saw him brought from the train in custody of Chief Deputy Sheriff C. M. Dougherty, and Deputy Sheriff Dick Stover of Cuyahoga county and Al Isaac, Cleveland police, lieutenant. They were met by two local deputy sheriffs who accompanied the party to the penitentiary.

Whitfield, according to the deputies expressed the opinion while enroute here that he had not had a fair trial. At the penitentiary, however, he had nothing to say.

Warden Thomas assigned him number 4213, and he immediately was started through the "mill" where his height measurements were taken and he was given prison clothing.

It was regarded as likely that Whitfield would be placed in the idle house temporarily to "think over" his crime.

Dope On Main Go Bouters Has Local Fight Fans Talking Over Probable Outcome

Never before in the history of local boxing has there been such an even division of opinion as to the outcome of a bout as there is over the Nig Blair-Kid Lucky match which will be held Monday evening at the Millbrook Park. Many of the fans who have been wondering as to the condition will be surprised when the Portsmouth Panther steps in the ring. Previous to this week Nig put in two weeks of intense training at Camp Knox and weighs less today than any time during the past year. Blair weighed 145 pounds in his street clothes Thursday evening. This means that Lucky will find the local star down to his best fighting weight, which is around 142 pounds.

A peculiar twist in the Blair-Lucky match is that both boys have been defeated by Gil Elchoff, while Elchoff has been defeated by Young Webb, and Webb in turn defeated by both Blair and Lucky. This makes the out pretty hard to figure from the standpoint of dope. Lucky is much better than his bout with Nig Burt would indicate. Many are of the opinion that Nig could have tried the sleeper on Blair, however, the Dayton boy cannot afford to be too "reverse gear" in his fighting apparatus. Something is sure to happen in the way of excitement as neither Nig nor Lucky are known to back up when they box.

While Shifty Dando has never been defeated in a local ring, anything is liable to happen when he stacks up against Frankie Bob of Dayton on Monday evening. Lou Richards, who brought Billy Thorpe and Andy Parker over here to meet Dando, went back to Dayton each time on the losing end. This time he says he has a boy in Bob who will take Shifty's measure. At any rate, Mr. Bob will have to keep going at top speed every round as Dando does not believe in any loafing when the bell rings.

Al White, the slugging blacksmith, hopes to return a winner this time. He meets Young White of Dayton in an eight-round go. Butch always gives a good account of himself, win or lose.

Doc Price will meet Casey Jones of Dayton in a six-round go. Doc is staging a come-back and according to his workmate is in fine condition. If Price wins Monday night he has been punched a bout with Jack White of the pride of Chillicothe.

Tickets went on sale at the Smoke House Thursday evening and over a hundred were sold the first hour, showing that the fans appreciate an open-air show. The Millbrook hall is ideal for boxing purposes and has again as large as the winter garden. The center aisles have also been eliminated closer to the ring on the extreme ends. There will be aisles on each side instead of a single center aisle. Seats will be held at the Smoke House until seven o'clock Monday evening. Seats may also be reserved by telephone.

Peebles Stock Farm Calf Wins Honor At Fair

That the Peebles stock farm is going to be quite a factor in the production of blooded and high grade cattle is evidenced by the Hereford cow being displayed at the Scioto county fair. This cow was the first calf born on the Peebles farm and was sold by Mr. Peebles to James Hill, who then sold it to the Ohio State University. The experts at the University selected this Hereford calf from out of a showing of forty-seven others. According to those who have seen the cow, she is one of the finest animals ever shown at any fair, and is looked upon as the prize animal in the big Hereford herd at the Ohio State University dairy farm.

Hold Memorial Service

Memorial services were held in honor of Warren G. Harding yesterday evening by the Junior Order of United American Mechanics at their regular meeting. A short talk by C. B. Greeninger, readings from the Scriptures, and prayer offered by Chaplain Frank H. Schmidt, completed the program. The second degree was conferred on Donald Evans at last night's meeting. Elwood Price and Henry Seaggs received both the first and second degrees. Three applications for membership were received. The invitation of the Daughters of America for the order to attend the outing in celebration of the 11th anniversary of the founding of the D. of A. lodge was accepted. The outing will be held at the Inverness Fair grounds, Saturday, Aug. 18.

Three Drunks Are Towed In

James Ross, John Henry and John Polchik were the names given by a trio who took aboard two heavy engines of "tanglefoot" last night and then fell into the hands of the police. Henry was found yesterday afternoon sleeping off a jag at Elwood and Gay streets, and Polchik was found wandering at French and Gay streets, while Ross was discovered in the vestibule of a building on street where he had fallen by the wayside. They were locked up for intoxication pending trial in Municipal court Saturday.

Thousands

funeral ended. In gracious kindness, the sorrowful woman who longed for the end of the public ordeal that has stretched into more than a week of ceremonial and pageant that the people of the nation, the state and the town that claimed him as its son might testify of their grief, set aside her own wish to be alone with her dead at the last. Throughout hours of darkness last night the casket which held him lay open in the humble home and all were freely welcome to pass beside it again. To-day the face of the dead chief was made visible for the last time to the "boys" who knew him as "the boss" in the offices of the Marion Star when he sat there as editor. A few others came privately to the casket because of their close associations of their bygone years with the dead. In the depths of her sorrow, Mrs. Harding had not failed of the thoughtful kindness that has marked her every action before and since death came to her husband in San Francisco.

Last night it seemed that every man, woman and child in Marion stood on the shaded, quiet streets to pay this last honor to the dead. No man knew with exactness how many thousands had walked through the modest room where the casket lay and gazed a moment on the peaceful face under the glass.

Hushes Of Mourning
There was a hush of mourning about the dark streets despite the hundreds waiting to enter and the other hundreds streaming slowly away, talking with the voices of the neighbors and friends whose great hearts they had awakened. They had seen him in death as they had known him in life. The calm, kindly dignity that marked him in his hours as president remained with him even when life had ceased. He was the same Warren Harding, some of them had known for years and seemed only to sleep as he lay there. It was hard for them to realize that this old friend was dead.

The last day before the tomb shall claim these "hallowed relics" began peacefully and with no stir of marching legions to join in last honors. Here and there on the streets walked men of the Union National Guard, but they waited for the most part, unarmored and merely to see that the peace and quiet of the sleeping was not disturbed by the thoughtlessness. They would not go with him to his tomb.

Again today the stir of movement of life in Marion was hushed in honor of the dead. The great mills that surrounded it were silent and deserted. No rattling traffic of commerce broke the quiet of the shade streets. On the railroads, long trains came in to add new thousands from distant cities to the throng already gathered, but no whistle sounded and the clanging of the bells was stilled.

City of Silence
Except for the multitude that grew hourly to fill the sidewalks with moving humanity, Marion was a city of silence in her sorrow, a silence that would not be broken until the simple funeral train gathered late in the day to bear the dead President to the tomb that awaited him. Then there must come an added stir and movement that could not be avoided, then would voices be raised in prayer or sacred melodies as the last rites were said. But the morning hours were peaceful and calm and as untroubled as the sleep of the man thus honored.

Another President was riding to Marion during these morning hours, coming to say his farewell to a man he loved and a chief of state whom he had been loyally devoted to. The funeral train was the first of the special train bearing President Coolidge from Washington. Arriving and for now the first coming of the national Chief Executive to an American community would be marked by no cheering or clamor. Turned Back to Devery Task

IT CARRIED PRESIDENT BACK TO SPRINGFIELD

—FROM ORIGINAL IN POSSESSION OF CHICAGO HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

This is the funeral coach that bore Lincoln's body from Washington to Springfield, Ill. The original of this photograph was snapped in Chicago as the funeral party halted there before starting upon the last lap of its sad journey.

Before darkness falls the Presidential train will be speeding over the rails again to Washington, for the business of the state cannot wait for more than a brief moment of sorrow, however great the loss. Then also will Mrs. Harding have turned back to the dreary task still before her at the White House leaving her heart in the tomb at Marion.

Eventually she will come back to live here, close to her dead, as her plans now are known. But to-morrow in Washington she faces a new and terrible ordeal when the intimate family treasures, cherished by her dead husband and herself, must be dispersed to new surroundings, that the mansion can be made ready for the new President.

President and Mrs. Coolidge hastened to assure Mrs. Harding days ago that she might continue to consider the White House her home, but she would not have it so for more than the brief time required to ship away the personal things that surrounded her there during her brief time as first lady of the land.

In her decision to leave for Washington immediately after the funeral, Mrs. Harding gave further proof of the dauntless courage which has brought her the admiration of the nation in these arduous days of trial. Her spirit would not brook delay in facing the task she must do. The everyday things of life must go on, however sick the heart.

Harding

promise rather than bluster and threat.

On the western trip which this correspondent took part way across the continent before going to Europe, the late president revealed publicly the side of his personality which to his friends had always seemed a characteristically Harding trait in the White House. It was his consciousness of almost superhuman responsibility.

No man in the world possesses the power over so many millions of people as does the president of the United States. No one but a man who has exercised that power can faintly imagine the pressure of conscience which again and again develops out of the complexity of facts and circumstances demanded in presidential decisions. Instinct rather than deliberate judgment often turns the scales of action. And Warren Harding was a man who worried about things although he tried hard not to show it. He was neither sensitive nor calloused to criticism. He thought of himself and of office impersonally, rarely did he use the personal pronoun in conversation about official business. It was usually "the executive" or "the president" who would be considered. "The presidency was something of which he felt himself somewhat in awe.

The last night the writer spent on the presidential train Harding talked of sincerity and there was just a plaintive note in his voice as he referred, in passing, to the questioning attitude of some of his critics. He had hoped to be given credit at least for good intention and sincerity. His own shortcomings he realized fully. He could talk to you of the ebb and flow of his administration in popular favor with an easy detachment of one who had had no connection whatsoever with the presidency. There was above all a modest appraisal of self as genuine as it was rare.

Over Europe he had hoped to see early peace. He told the writer he felt the Ruhr controversy would be settled before autumn. He was confident that the Europeans would work out their problems without the need of American intervention. But he was none the less concerned. He hoped to inspire by his words on the western platform a passion for peace. He talked of social justice, obedience to law, fair dealing, among economic interests. Indeed, of all the points of friction in the American commonwealth, with the fervor of religion, normally to him was not merely economic readjustment, but a return to religion. It was as if he realized the war has shaken faiths and beliefs and that the need of the hour was more faith and more belief. Some observers noted an evangelistic spirit in his speeches not unlike the idealistic appeals on Woodrow Wilson's ill-fated trip across the continent.

Just after the beginning of his second term, the hand of fate appeared to turn against McKinley. He, too, took a trip to the Pacific coast. In San Francisco his wife's health gave way and she was extremely ill. At one time her life was despaired of. That was in April 1901. Five months later, at Buffalo, the President was slain by the fanatical Czolgosz. The bitterness of Mrs. McKinley's grief was intense as she once more crossed the threshold of the White House. Followed seven years of the Roosevelt. The Colonel never ceased to have "a bully time." He adored the Presidency. He liked the big stick. It placed in his hands to crack the knuckles of all knaves, of all "undesirables," of all "malefactors of great wealth," of each and every member of the American club. The Colonel swung the big stick with great gusto. His wife was perhaps the happiest the White House has ever known. The wedding of "Princess Alice" to ex-Prince of Wales was one of its most brilliant functions. The Tafts, too, had a very happy time in the White House, but this administration was not without a threat of sadness. Soon after she became the First Lady, Mrs. Taft's health gave way and virtually the entire social program of one season was cancelled. Mrs. Taft later regained much of her strength, however, and the silver wedding anniversary of the Tafts was a very happy event.

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—Do you know who the little man is that I meet every day on Gallia street? I see him morning noon and night and he just stares at me. Dolly I sure would like to know who this man is, and if you know please print his name in the paper. I was told you know everybody.

ANXIOUS LULU.
You are mistaken if you think I know everybody, as I would not even know this man if I found him in my soup. Why don't you stop and hold him up and ask him who he is, and what he does, where he is going, etc.

Dear Dolly—Like many other unhappy wives, I am coming to you to find out how I can keep my husband at home of evenings. He stops out every night, and I just have to guess or imagine what he does as he never tells me anything. He comes home, eyes. The hubby expected her to be gone. Now Dolly we don't have any trouble over our domestic affairs as he is a good husband and provides well for me, but he has this one fault that I can't break him of. Can you suggest anything I could do?

UNHAPPY WIFE.
I have a word of a woman who cured her husband of this habit just like this: One night he left as usual, and after going a short distance, he found that he had forgotten to take an umbrella, and as it looked very threatening he decided he would go back and get his shaver stick. His wife was still sitting in the living room where he had left here so he decided to slip in any play a joke on her. He tiptoes over and put his hands over her eyes. The hubby expected her to be frightened and let out a scream, but instead she said very softly and sweetly, "Is that you, Tom?" Her husband's name was John, and he hasn't been down town at night since. He is still sticking around the house waiting for the mysterious Tom to appear on the scene. You might do likewise.

Dear Dolly—Since every body in Portsmouth and elsewhere seem to be violating the rules for hanging the flag, through ignorance of the proper way to display mourning for the President of the United States, I would like for you to print the proper rules for the benefit of all concerned.

TIMES READER.
According to a United States Army officer the following rules are given for the display of the flag:

Under no conditions should the Stars and Stripes, with their halcyon colors of red, white and blue, be touched or gathered with black.

It is improper to drape or fur the flag of the United States with crepe or other black mourning insignia. Black festoons or borders may be placed, but in no way touching the flag.

Army officers suggest that all flags displayed outside be placed at half staff.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES — THE PIRATE SHIP

Jack at first, was very much excited over the thrill of a dog fight.
And then, the ship and the ship dog lunged at each other right before his eyes. The little adventurer realized that one of the dogs was likely to be badly injured or, in fact, maybe both of them.

Jack therefore waited no longer, but jumped into the middle of the ring of sailors' pirates and seized Flip by the neck. Shouting of anger quickly arose. "Look the hounds fight," shouted several pirates. "Get out of the way, boy," came the cry from some of the others.

sent word to the Twins.

"You'll have to find Georgie Porgie at once," he said when Nancy and Nick came hurrying in their magic shoes and bumped their heads three times against the royal throne. "Try to find him at once if not sooner. If you don't, I'm afraid his daddy will have a fit, his aunts and uncles will flee, and his mother half a dozen fits.
No doubt, like so many of my other subjects, he has jumped on one of those pesky lightning bugs and gone some place."

"Oh, we'll find him," said Nancy.
"We've found every Pee Wee who started out to find and I'm sure Georgie Porgie can't be far away either."

So away they went to look for the little Pee Wee fellow who was so small he could have hidden in a fairy's thimble.

First they looked under the mandara leaves. But he wasn't there.
Then they looked in the daisy patch.
But he wasn't there. Then they came to the meadow where a hundred little ground spiders had woven a hundred little webs all looking like lace doilies on a green table.

And there was Georgie Porgie Pee
Wee sticking in one of them.

"Help, help! I can't get away," he called loudly. "Help! I'm caught!"

When the Twins hauled him out he told how it happened. "I was playing creeches," he said. "Jumping from one blade of grass to another and pretending the spider web was a net to catch me like the circus people when they fall. It caught me all right, I'll say.
It's a good thing you came along or
I'd have made a nice dinner for Mrs.
Spider."

So the Twins took him home and nobody had any fits at all.

So away they went to look for the

Never Again,' Says Stout; Fined For Possessing Skunks

The next time Jacob W. Stout, owner, 915 Findlay street, seeks a skunk playing at the roadside, he will probably pass on his way without molesting the animal. A few days ago Stout observed a couple of the pretty live animals while on a jaunt out the N. & W. railroad tracks in the vicinity of the Vera bridge, and he decided to capture them. He brought them home and penned them up in his garage and later made the fatal mistake of attempting to sell the animals for pets, as it was through this transaction that Game Protector Frank Voorhes learned of the incarcerated skunks today and he caused Stout's arrest for violating the game laws by having live skunks in his possession. It costs Stout just $100 and costs, which was the punishment meted out by Squire George S. Morgan under his plea of guilty.

Things Seen In Portsmouth

Prominent Lucasville man forgetting to turn out the lights in front of his place of business until the wee small hours of the morning, when he slipped out in his nightie and turned 'em off.

Workman going home through the East End carrying shoes and overalls, walking in his bare feet, trying to keep cool.

Young lady on Sixth street practicing her vocal lesson at four o'clock in the morning. One hour too late, for "It's Three O'clock in the Morning."

Man taking his daughter to work and then waiting out in front of the store until time for her lunch, and in the afternoon waiting for closing.

Time so that he may take her home. Thus he puts in his time and keeps away the young men, killing two birds with one stone.

Young lady dropping her pocket-book and spilling the contents, about thirty pennies, all over Chillicothe street. She must have been treasurer of a Sunday School Class.

Fat lady racing with her little boy up Seventh street.

Soda clerk buying soda at his own fountain and making the other jerk connect the dope. After the soda was made, said clerk walked around to the front of the fountain and ate the stuff in real style.

DISSOLUTION OF DOLLINGS COMPANY IS SOUGHT

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.—Dissolution of the R. L. Dollings Company of Ohio and several subsidiaries was sought in an application in quo warranto charging misuse of corporate authorities, franchises and privileges, and assumption of franchises and privileges not granted to them, which was filed in the court of appeals here by Attorney General C. C. Crabbe.

In addition to the parent company, the Matthews Engineering Company, of Sandusky; the C. & E. Shoe Company of Columbus; The Recording Services Company of Dayton; the Florida Farm Industries Company, of Ohio; the Franklin Brick and Tile Company of Columbus; the North Carolina Farms Company, of Ohio; and the International Note and Mortgage Company of Ohio, were named by the attorney general.

Would Convert Assets

The application if successful, will result in forfeiture of franchises and immediate conversion of all assets available into cash to be distributed to creditors and stockholders of the eight organizations affected.

It might also mean that the administration of the affairs of the companies may be taken out of the hands of the present receivers and vested in trustees named by the court of appeals. There was possibility, however, it was believed that the present receivers, Paul A. DeLong, S. A. Kinnear and W. C. Willard, might be named as trustees in the court decision to place affairs in the hands of such a body.

Based on Charges

Charges upon which the application was based had been brought out in the receivership hearing of the Phoenix Portland Cement Company, now being held in common pleas court. Stock sales under fraudulent representations that companies were earning greater dividends than were actually earned; payment of unearned dividends; printing and promulgation of false prospectuses and false propaganda for the purpose of deceiving prospective buyers, and creation of a "preferred stock dividend are the direct cause of much unhappiness in our homes; their condition irritates and wears upon the husband and often ruins a child's disposition. This condition of the mother is often due to some weakness which makes her entirely unfit to perform her household duties and bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves. Every woman who finds herself in this condition should remember that statistics prove that 98 out of every 100 women who suffer from female ills are helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and lose no time in giving it a fair trial.

guaranty fund" through sale of stock in the parent organization were among the charges contained in the petition.

Mr. Crabbe maintained that "said fraudulent schemes destroyed all value of the stock subscribed for and paid for by purchasers."

The subsidiary companies were charged by the attorney general with having permitted the directors "to appropriate accumulations to their own private benefit and use."

Locher Is Mentioned

The Phoenix company hearing produced an implication on the part of Mr. Crabbe that Cyrus Locher, state director of commerce, was present at a conference in the Desher Hotel at which Twilight Harrison, vice president of the Dollings company also was in attendance, and that there were six quarts of liquor in the room. The conference was alleged to have taken place on the night before receivers were appointed for the organization. The implication was made during an attempt by the attorney general to establish a connection between the state securities department and the Dollings company.

Harrison denied emphatically that such a conference had been held.

Denial Is Made.

The Langwell Cafeteria

company, before or since the receivership, or at any time, is a falsehood."

"It is true that I was in the Desher casually one evening after application for receivership had been made, and after the sale of the Dollings company stocks had been revoked. Charles H. Gerish of Columbus and myself were seated in the lobby of the Desher Hotel when Mr. Harrison came along and began the conversation with Mr. Gerish, who in turn introduced Mr. Harrison. Mr. Harrison launched into a discussion of the condition of the Dollings company which attracted some attention, whereupon Mr. Gerish suggested that we go up to Mr. Harrison's room and the discussion there continued. Presently Mr. Gerish suggested that Mr. Harrison was tired and that he had a hard day ahead of him and prevailed upon him to go to his bedroom and retire, which he did. At no time was any intoxicating liquor in evidence, nor served nor drunk."

Mr. Gerish issued a corroborative statement.

Mr. Harrison in answering questions put by the attorney general also denied that a check of $100,000 had been drawn on the company in 1921 or 1922 and made payable to him for expenses. He also denied that he had put in an account for $180,000 in January.

Ptomaine Poisoning

What do YOU know about ptomaine poisoning, the disease primarily responsible for President Harding's death. It is one of the most prevalent poisons to health. The President's illness and death shows how dangerous it can become, through complications.

Dr. Clifford C. Robinson, Chicago, one of America's foremost medical men, makes the following explanation of ptomaine poisoning for readers of The Times.

Dr. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON
It may be that many laymen are not informed as to the real nature of ptomaine poisoning. The word, ptomaine—or more properly ptomaine—is derived from the Greek, meaning fallen body, or corpse. Some physicians argue that the word should not be used in connection with food poisoning. They claim real ptomaines form only in human bodies after death, and at present are only two in number.

Scientists who make a special study of such bacterial poisons are called toxicologists.

Twenty-five years ago, many of the important laboratories, in our great cities and also at the universities, were eagerly carrying out the study of ptomaines. This was on account of the expressed hope that science might clear up the true chemistry of bacterial poisoning. Not much interest is being manifested today. This is owing to the fact that ptomaines were found to be not very toxic. On the other hand, very poisonous ptomaines may be formed by non-pathogenic bacteria. What this means to the layman is that there is really comparatively little food poisoning caused by the presence of ptomaines.

The poisoning from which persons suffer who are commonly said to have this trouble is contracted by eating food that is partially spoiled or decomposed. This may be improperly preserved canned meats, tinned fish or other fish, sausage, cheese, ice cream or milk. Under different conditions the same organisms may produce totally different types of ptomaines. This is an important fact, when seeking to find the real cause, in a patient.

The symptoms show in one who has been attacked by ptomaine poisoning in a very short time. The system endeavors to throw it off and dizziness is followed by severe headache, chilliness and sharp abdominal pains. In some cases violent vomiting occurs and the patient becomes partially unconscious and sometimes in severe cases coma and death.

In the treatment of ptomaine poisoning, the usual treatment of getting the material out of the stomach before it can enter the system is followed. Use stomach pump at once and empty the gastro-intestinal tract. The physician will then be careful to see that no bacterial growth is present or remains.

In a mild case, that is taken in time, the recovery is often rapid. But great care is required in more severe cases to make sure that the patient does not suffer from complications of the ptomaine. This may cause various trouble and a long sickness.

TOMORROW IS PORTSMOUTH DAY AT FAIR

Good Sized Crowd Is Out Today In Spite Of Rain

A storm that swept the county at noon today put somewhat of a damper on the big attendance expected at the Portsmouth Fair this afternoon. Hundreds of men, women and children visited the fair grounds this morning and indications were that a banner attendance mark would be registered when along came the rain clouds which showers that caused many to change their minds about visiting the county show. There were, however, paid admissions yesterday. The fair comes to a close Saturday when Portsmouth Day will be observed. The West Union school band was one of the big attractions on the grounds today. Many of the displays were judged yesterday and premiums awarded. The judging was to be completed today, the size of the displays making it impossible for the work to be completed in one day. Today's race card included a 2:40 trot with a purse of $350 and a 2:25 p. m. race with a purse of $400. A 2:50 was offered in a 2:24 pace with a purse of $250 and a 2:25 trot with a purse of $400. A $500 purse will be offered in a county running race. The race results yesterday: 2:18 Trot—Purse $550. North Bond.....1 1 1 Owner, Hatfield Estate, Driver, Ed Scott. George Russ.....2 2 3

A Notable Victory For The Live Stock Interests

LOUISVILLE LIVE STOCK EXCHANGE, LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 10.—Decision handed down by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the Mixed Loading Rule Case will save Southern live stock shippers hundreds of thousands of dollars annually said W. S. Bell, President of the Louisville Live Stock Exchange in a statement issued this morning. At present the rate on hogs is 15 per cent higher than on cattle, and that on sheep and lambs is 25 per cent higher than on cattle. When live stock is shipped in mixed carloads the shipper is required to pay freight charges based on the highest rated species of live stock in the load at the highest minimum weight. For example a shipper at Troy, Tenn., loaded a car last week with the following: 34 cattle weight.....28000 2 calves weight.....530 25350 He was charged for 28350 pounds at the rail rate of 40¢ cents, or $115.55. If the calves had been left out he would have been charged the rail rate of 35¢ cents at 28000 pounds, or $98.00. Stating it differently the two calves cost $17.55 freight. Under the new ruling the rail rate of 35¢ cents would apply on this entire shipment which would make the freight charges $92.86 or a saving in this one instance of $15.69. From this illustration you will readily understand what a tremendous saving this stand will be to the farmers of the south who ship thousands of mixed carloads of live stock each year due to the fact that our live stock in the South is raised on the small farm lots of various species necessitating that at least 40 per cent of same be shipped in mixed loads at the higher rate, whereas the western producers raise their stock on ranches and have extensive feeding operations and are thus able in most cases to ship in straight carloads and avoid the penalty. Being unable to get the railroads to make any change in these mixed loading rules, the live stock interests, through the National Live Stock Exchange filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission in December 1921, alleging that these rules subjected the shippers of live stock to the payment of rates for transportation which were unjust and unreasonable in violation of Section 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act. The case was heard in Chicago by Attorney-Examiner Bronson Jewell at which time the Louisville Live Stock Exchange filed exhibits and introduced witnesses to illustrate the injustices of the rules complained of to the producers and shippers of the South. The decision in this case which becomes effective on September 28th is final as the Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered that it is to remain in force until changed by the Commission.

OBITUARY

John Riggs

John Riggs, son of Jacob Riggs and wife, was born August 26, 1884 in Hesse Damstadt, Germany. In the year 1914 at the age of six years, his parents left their native land with their family and all their earthly possessions to make America their home. They came directly from their native land to Portsmouth, Ohio, and after six months moved out to what is known as Little Scioto and became the pioneers of that neighborhood. It was in this place that the deceased grew to manhood and lived all of his lifetime. In the year 1850 he was united in marriage to Miss Selma Wiehle, and to this union three sons and two daughters were born. One son and one daughter having died in early life. In his youth he united with the Lutheran church and remained faithful to his confession until his death. At the time of his death he was a member of the First Lutheran church of Portsmouth. After the death of his beloved wife about 18 years ago.

Tribute Paid To Harding In Resolutions Passed By K. Of C.

The following resolutions on the death of President Warren G. Harding were passed at a special meeting of Portsmouth Council, Knights of Columbus:

"The Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call to His eternal reward one of Ohio's great sons, one of the nation's most illustrious Presidents, Warren G. Harding, the twenty-ninth President of the United States. He was sincere, courageous, brilliant, a true Christian gentleman, a real American, a great leader always."

"In addition to the common burden of sorrow which afflicts the whole nation and the civilized world, we feel a sense of personal loss in his death because he was from Ohio, and was a frequent visitor to our city."

after that the confidants of public life left no stone. In his life he has made domestic and private virtue illustrious, contributed greatly to the development and honor of the nation, and won a foremost place among the honored Presidents of the republic."

"It will be some compensation for our sorrow if the cause of nationality for which he lived receives impetus from his untimely and sudden death; therefore,

"Be it resolved by Portsmouth Council No. 741 of the Knights of Columbus, That we share with all the people of this nation a common grief because of the death of our beloved President; and

"Be it resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our records and a copy be sent to Mrs. Harding."

Governor Takes Lifers On Vacation

Earl Jennings, Constantine Zepiani, Delar. Warden, P.C. Thomas, Gov. Donahay

A sensation has been caused in Ohio and in Canada by the vacation plans of Governor Victor Donahay, of Ohio, and Warden P. C. Thomas, of the Ohio State Penitentiary, at Columbus. With their families, the Governor and the Warden were going to be settled for a long stay at the Gulf River, near Cobouk, Ontario, Canada, when it was discovered that two of their servants were men who had been sentenced to life imprisonment in Ohio for murder. The Canadian official announced the prisoners would be deported and Donahay, who claimed his family was going to make political capital of the event, declared he would leave Canada if the officials acted. The lifers are Earl Jennings, who killed a man in a poolroom fight, and Constantine Zepiani, who killed a street car conductor.

Two Cars Crash Into Tree; One Man May Die; Drivers Arrested

Two men were seriously injured, one sustaining a probable fracture of the skull, in early morning automobile accidents today. The men were injured when the machines struck trees with considerable force. Two other young men were injured in one of the accidents.

The most serious of the two was an accident on Scioto Trail about 6:30 this morning when Clarence McGinnis sustained a possible skull fracture. The other occurred at Fourth and Court streets about 4:45 o'clock and William Stenshorn of Front street was seriously cut about the head.

Clarence McGinnis, about 30, married, formerly of New Boston, is in Hempstead hospital with a possible fracture of the skull and other injuries as the result of an automobile wreck on Scioto Trail about 6:30 o'clock this morning, when a big touring car driven by a man named Woodrow Moyer, left the road and crashed into a big tree between Clifton and Wakefield. Moyer was later arrested by Sheriff Harry Dunham on a charge of driving while intoxicated. About eleven o'clock he was given a trial before Squire George Morgan, who fined him $100 and costs and tacked on a 30 days jail sentence. In addition, he suspended his right to drive for 90 days.

Moyer, according to Sheriff Dunham, was so far under the influence of liquor that he could not tell much about the accident. All he knew was that the party, consisting of three men, had been out all night and were just out for a ride this morning when the machine left the road and crashed into a tree. McGinnis was removed to Hempstead hospital in Lynn's ambulance and Dr. S. S. Haldermann attended him. He was unconscious and his mental condition indicated a skull fracture. An X-ray was taken to determine if the skull was fractured. McGinnis also suffered serious cuts about the eyes, it being necessary to take stitches in both eye-lids to close small cuts.

W. G. Jones was the name given by the other man in the accident. Jones and Moyer escaped injury. McGinnis formerly lived at West and Rhodes avenues, New Boston, and worked at the steel plant. He left there sometime ago for Quincy, and relatives when notified of the accident said they did not know he was in the city. Moyer told Sheriff Dunham all three were employed at the steel plant.

William Stenshorn, former ambulance driver for the Lynn undertaking establishment, 319 Front street, and Harold Thompson, mechanic, 1231 Kinney's Lane, were seriously injured and badly bruised about 4:45 o'clock this morning when the 1923 model Buick touring car, driven by Oren Blair, 1418 Ninth street, in residence on the side of the Jordan, crashed into a tree a short distance further down the street with such a force that the right front spring was driven nearly five inches into the tree. The frame of the car was knocked out of line, the crank case was broken, and the fan, lights, steering wheel, fenders, radiator and windshield were smashed. By-standers say the car was going nearly forty-five miles an hour, and when Blair, going north on Court street, turned west into Fourth street, he made the turn too wide and could not get his car straightened up in time to keep it from hitting the Jordan car. Luckily the Essex was only slightly damaged. Stenshorn was rendered unconscious by the crash for some time, suffering severe gashes about the head and minor cuts about the lips. Later it was discovered that his right ankle was badly swollen and an X-ray will be taken to determine whether or not the member is broken.

Dr. O. D. Tatja was called to the scene of the accident and both Stenshorn and Thompson were taken to Hempstead hospital. Thompson suffered a broken finger and severe bruises and cuts. Both of the men were removed from the hospital later this morning.

The other occupants of the car, the driver, Blair, and Charles Bridwell, 1026 Chillicothe street, who was in the front seat with Blair, were only slightly bruised and cut by the glass from the windshield.

Both Thompson and Stenshorn were hurt against the back of the front seat by the impact of the collision with the tree, causing most of their injuries.

Blair was taken to the police station on a charge of driving while intoxicated, but on account of his injuries he was released on a promise to appear as soon as he was able. Acting Police Captain Haley is making an investigation of the crash.

Resolutions Are Adopted On Death of W. Grant Williams

The Superintendents' and Foremen's Association of The Excelsior Shoe company adopted a resolution Friday lamenting the death of W. G. Williams, treasurer of the company, and sent a letter of sympathy, of which the following is a copy, to the family:

Mrs. W. G. Williams and Family: God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst your beloved husband and father and from our association a true friend.

As we feel the loss keenly we realize that words cannot console you at this time and are inadequate to express our feeling, yet we desire to share with you and your family the burden of sorrow and express our sincere and heartfelt sympathy at this time. While our loss cannot be compared with your own, it is as great as can be when one friend is separated from another, and he was our friend.

Workman Hit By An Engine

William Wright, an air-hose employee at the N. and W. Terminals, was badly bruised about the head, face and shoulders Friday morning, when sideswiped and knocked down by a train in the East Portsmouth yards. He was given first aid at the office of Dr. S. S. Haldermann. An X-ray taken by Virgil Fowler showed bones were broken.

Hatfield's Horses To Be Kept On The County Fair Tracks

IRONTON, O., Aug. 10—Attorney H. M. Edwards Wednesday was appointed administrator of the estate of the late Fred Hatfield and will remain in charge until the final settlement. The appointment was made as the result of an agreement of the deceased's brothers, Elmer and Walter, both of whom were in the city, called here by their brother's death.

Mr. Hatfield was owner of or interested in some 23 race horses which have been entered in several county fairs in this locality, some of them being scheduled to start today at the Scioto county fair at Lucasville. It is the intention of the administrator to have the horses continue in the races for which they have been entered, and in this connection Mr. Edwards went to Lucasville Thursday.

British Join Americans In Homage To Harding

LONDON, August 10 (By the Associated Press).—Several thousand Americans and British crowded in and around Westminster Abbey, the spiritual center of the empire to-day to mourn the death of President Harding. Hundreds who could not be accommodated in the ancient cathedral lined the streets and squares in the vicinity of the Parliament building as prominent personages arrived for the service. Then the overflowing crowd gathered in the abbey yard, where it heard the funeral music played on the great organ. As the congregation was being seated the organist played "Chopin's Funeral March," and at the first stroke of twelve by Big Ben—the clock on the tower of the House of Commons—the choir and clergy of the abbey entered, chanting the opening sentences of the burial services. The congregation then joined in singing Mr. Harding's favorite hymns and after the benediction remained with bowed heads while the organ played the dead march, from Saul.

The Duke and Duchess of York represented King George and Queen Mary at the service. Queen Alexandra and the Prince of Wales sent court chamberlains, while Prime Minister Baldwin and many members of the Cabinet attended.

Brownings Face Trial

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, Aug. 10.—John Browning, Jr., and his cousin, Mariner A. Browning, accused slayers of Benjamin F. Ballantyne, again are facing trial on charges of first degree murder after the action yesterday of District Judge G. A. Iverson, who overruled the defense motion to quash the information against the defendants.

The Brownings, who are at liberty under $25,000 bond each, were ordered to appear in court tomorrow for pleading.

John M. Browning, Jr., is the son of the famous firearms inventor who lives at Ogden, Utah. The shooting of a Ballantyne occurred in the library of the Ballantyne home here on April 10 last. Mariner Browning is alleged to have fired the fatal shot during an altercation which grew out of an argument concerning Ballantyne's alleged mistreatment of his wife. The widow is the sister of the defendant, John M. Browning, Jr., who was held as an accessory.

The original charge of first degree murder against the Brownings was filed by County Attorney Arthur E. Moreton, but the subsequent preliminary hearing before Judge Pratt resulted in the defendants being bound over under the lesser charge of second degree murder.

New York Mourns For Departed President

NEW YORK, August 10.—All New York—its thousands of poor, its officials, its bankers and its great population of citizens from many lands—mourned for Warren G. Harding to-day.

As the early morning displaced the "crosses of light" that had shone throughout the night from the windows of skyscrapers there was missing the rush of thousands to their daily tasks. Bank and business houses generally were closed. Only necessary work was undertaken.

Only in the sense that business was forsaken was the day a holiday. It was a day of mourning—the world of sport stopping its play. Not only were baseball games and other important athletic matches canceled, but amateurs paid their respects to the memory of one who loved sport, by refraining from their games. Many public and private golf courses were closed, as were many bathing beaches. Gay Broadway was sad, while boisterous Coney Island called a halt to all its activities until after the hour when the President's body was to be placed in its vault.

Telegraph and telephone services were curtailed, as were all transportation services both in the greater city and to and from suburban districts. Harbor craft for the most part, lay at their docks.

Instead of its play, New York turned out to attend memorial services. There was scarcely a cathedral, church or synagogue in the city in which such services were not planned. At most of them the strains of "Lead Kindly Light," the President's favorite hymn, blended with the distant booming of cannon in salute from the various forts about the city.

Thus, the tribute of the metropolis to one who came from a "small town" was as simple as the tribute of that "small town" itself.

Stream Of Humanity Pours Into Marion

MARION, OHIO, August 10.—Morning's gray dawn ushering in the day when President Harding is to be laid to rest by his home folks found thousands standing in line waiting to pass his bier. The line which formed early yesterday long before the arrival of the President's body, had scarcely ended at 1 o'clock this morning, after approximately 25,000 persons had looked the last time upon his face, until a new line began to form. By 6 o'clock the line extended for six long blocks and was constantly lengthening.

The doors of the Harding home were not scheduled to be opened to the public until 9 o'clock. They are to be closed at 1 o'clock and the funeral cortege is to leave the house for the cemetery at 2 p. m. and many members of the Cabinet attended in person.

Thousands Pour Into City

All during the night and increasing as the day grew on, thousands of people from all over the country kept pouring into the city from all compass points in one continuous stream. Thousands of automobiles were packed along the roadsides outside of the city, their occupants catching what snatches of sleep they might until morning.

Special trains bearing other thousands began arriving during the night and continued to come in to-day on all roads entering the city. The city streets were packed with people early and the task of feeding the visitors was taxing Marion's eating places.

Hundreds of people walked the streets all night unable or unwilling to go to bed. Many slept on benches about the courthouse or any place where they might sit or lie in the open.

Why Is It—
That the evening you planned for a quiet one is usually a rip snorter? ... that the day you go to the country it always rains? ... that all plans made between 1 and 6 a. m. never materialize? ... that every time you are taken to the theater you have seen the play before? ... that after you have given the waiter the order, you always discover on the menu a far more appetizing dish? ... that yesterday's newspaper seems ages old? ... that you can never remember the date of a particularly brilliant thought that struck you the other morning in the bath? ... that whenever you are in a hurry every thoroughfare turns out to be a one-way street of the opposite direction? ... that you can never tell what a woman is going to do next?—Life.

PEERLESS ICE CREAM

That's a small recipe, but if followed means happiness and contentment. BIRDS AND THEIR NESTS

Studies Made by Ornithologists Are Interesting—Incubation Not Always Work of the Female.

The average time taken by a bird to build its nest is about a week; but if the first one be destroyed a second home may be built in a day. A few birds afflicted with chronic laziness do no more than limp on old nests of last year. Immediately after the nest has been built, incubating begins, usually at the rate of one a day laid about the same time. Eggs laid in dark holes, like those of the woodpeckers and kingfishers, are always white so that they can be seen by the birds entering the nest. Eggs, however, are all colors. Often, contrary to popular opinion, the coloring is not at all protective. The number of eggs laid increases with the amount of danger to which they are exposed. Sea birds nesting on the inaccessible cliffs lay only one egg, waterfowl ten to twenty. The usual number is three to five. Incubation usually begins with the laying of the first egg. Ovis, however, begin when the last egg has been laid. Robins' eggs require 14 days' incubation, ducks' 27, geese's 35. In all cases during this period the eggs have to be constantly turned and moistened. Usually incubation is the work of the female alone, but the male sparrow is peculiar in that he sings his ditty—and does his share—Chicago Journal.

THE RIGHT WAY TO USE NATURAL GAS

The burners on your stove or range should not be more than one and one-fourth inches from the utensil. Otherwise, much of the heat is lost. They can easily be raised to the proper height if you find they are too low. The tip of the flame should just touch the bottom of the cooking vessel.

Avoid side drafts which deflect the flame. Do not permit it to "lick" up the sides of the vessel. Use grid tops or skeleton lids instead of solid tops. Have the cooking vessel ready before lighting the gas. When boiling has commenced, the same temperature can be maintained with a lower flame. Turn off the gas before the vessel is removed.

BEN J. CRAHAN, Manager

THE PORTSMOUTH GAS COMPANY

On Lookout For The Speeders

Sheriff Harry M. Dunham and his force of deputies are patrolling the Scioto Trail this week, because of the heavy traffic between this city and Lucasville fair grounds, as a safety measure in an effort to prevent accidents and possible loss of life.

The sheriff today issued a warning to all motorists in respect to the necessity of close observance of the traffic regulations with a request to all drivers to exercise the greatest care possible in operating their vehicles.

The sheriff in his statement pointed out there would be little or no chance of accidents if all motorists would obey the traffic regulations, but declared there seems to be a few motorists who have no regard for others and insist on speeding and otherwise disregarding the law.

"It is these 'birds' we are looking for," the sheriff stated, "and all offenders caught will have a hard time of it."

Peebles To Play Fullerton

The Peebles Tigers will show at Coney Island Sunday afternoon when the Adams county troupe comes for a diamond clash with the fence busting Fullerton Giants. The meeting of these two strong aggregations promises to be a slashing battle and to furnish barrels of excitement for the fans who are expected to turn out in numbers to observe the pastime.

The Kentuckians triumphed by a slight margin in the only meeting between the two teams this season and the invaders have sent word they are coming with a strong line up with a determination to even up matters.

The Only Difference

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

Clara Abington sat facing Charles Kean over the table of the restaurant in which she had sat with him 12 years before, wondering whether it was all a dream, those 12 years.

She was studying his face, noting the changes that the years had wrought. Kean's hair was thickly sprinkled with gray, there were lines of command about his mouth and eyes. He looked stouter, he looked prosperous. And he was prosperous, she knew. Yes, he was a different man from the one whom she had refused to let her eternal regret—in 1911.

Then she had been full of her stage career. She was to be a wonderful actress. To that career everything was to be sacrificed. She might, she thought, marry, later, some famous man—never a young business man like Charles Kean.

Now—she had learned wisdom with the years. She knew now the travail of hard work that never leads very far. She knew she would always be mediocre. She had saved a little money, and she would probably eventually amass enough to open a teashop with. She would do almost anything to escape the drudgery of stage life.

Except to marry an impossible man. There was, of course, a limit. But Charles Kean was on the right side of that limit. She wished that she had known it 12 years before. He had pleaded so hard, too. He had been ready to let her go. She had not loved him, but she had pitied him.

"It's no use, my dear boy," she had told him. "I have my career to think of. I am not going to consider marrying for years to come."

"I shall wait forever, if I need be," answered Charles Kean.

A few days before she had met him again. He told her that he had never forgotten her. He had simply waited until he felt the time was ripe. Would she dine with him in the restaurant where they had talked and parted?

Clara had felt a very warm thrill at her heart when he said that. Of course she had assented. And in the intervening days she had decided to marry him. She would be more than satisfied to be the bride of a prosperous man and not the usual stamp of business man, but one who had traveled, who understood things.

Yes, it all seemed like a dream, those 12 years that had passed. And she saw her own face reflected in the mirror opposite her. She had changed, too, of course. Her face had grown mature; she was thirty-five; but still she was a woman worth the winning. She realized that. She was not throwing herself away—neither was he. Well matched, both of them.

Charles was speaking. "I waited, Clara, dear, for many reasons. But there was never been any woman in my life whom I cared for as I did for you."

"It was wonderful of you, waiting all these years, Charles," she answered in low tones. "If I had only understood."

"You—you refused me, Clara. Our lives might have been so happy."

"Can't they be happy yet?" she ventured.

He was looking at her thoughtfully. "That's what I dared to dream," he answered. "Only—"

What was that he was saying? She listened, and at first she did not understand. He was gathering courage as he went on.

"I was hopeless. I thought you were gone out of my life forever. And then—well, Mildred and I cared for each other in a way, though I am sure she cared more than I did. I wanted a home and children. It was all so unsatisfactory. Clara, that marriage of mine, for you were always in my heart."

So he had been married! "Never mind the past, my dear," she said. "We have only each other to think of."

"That's what I hoped you'd say. I can take an apartment for you. Mildred will never find out about you, and—"

She looked at him in horror. "You mean—your wife's alive?" she asked. "And you are suggesting that—I didn't understand—Oh, no, no, Charles, that isn't in my line at all!"

And looking at him in dumb terror, she realized that fate had always destined their separation; 12 years before, because she would not marry, and now because he could not. That was the only difference; all the rest was a dream.

Five Fine Trains for China. Five trains of the most luxuriously appointed railroad coaches of American make have been recently shipped to China, including three private cars. All were built of steel, and in some of the sleeping cars each compartment has its own lavatory and the beds are placed transversely instead of in the usual American way. The cars were shipped in sections and erected in Chinese shops by Chinese workmen. The installation of the heating equipment, plumbing work and electric lighting system presented no difficulties at all to the force of workmen.

Simple Explanation. It becoming necessary to make certain repairs, the interior of the drug store was considerably upset. Shelf bottles were mussed at the rear of the store, show cases were shifted and chairs were piled upon tables. A large postcard rack was moved bodily to the sidewalk, where it was noticeable, to say the least.

"What's this for, doc?" inquired an acquaintance who happened along.

"Just airing my views," explained the druggist, playfully.

Harding's Final Editorial On "Home Coming"

MARION, O., Aug. 10—(By The Associated Press)—Warren G. Harding's last editorial in the Marion Daily Star, strangely enough, was on home-coming. It appeared on July 5, 1922.

"While Marion is celebrating the centennial of the city's founding," wrote Mr. Harding, "it is fine to rejoice in the coming together again to find happiness in the exchange of sentiments born of home-coming, to recall the pride in things accomplished and above all else appraise the qualities of men and measures which made us what we are today. The latter is essential to the preparedness for greater progress in the future."

"Sturdy men pioneered the way to early settlement—and sturdy women too. They blazed the way of development in Ohio, and sent many of their sons and daughters to the peaceful conquest of the greater west—the Mississippi and Missouri valleys. Resolute and able men made secure the social order here and simple and courageous men blended determination with genius and made the industrial beginning. They had little of wealth, but they wrought wealth out of opportunity. Only a few knew their struggles, their sacrifices, but honesty, simplicity, industry, capacity and determination are known to have been the chief essentials of their success.

"These make for success anywhere, and are available to all who aspire. Let Marion preserve every good lesson of yesterday's and resolve to go on, adding to the stride in industry and commerce, and determined that every enlargement in material growth shall reflect larger progress in the finer attainments which make a community worth while. The fit counterpart to the city of material success in the city of happy homes, ample education, fortunate and profitable employment, worship of God facilities, and a community soul."

Great Blue Flag To Wave Before The Hearse

MARION, O., Aug. 10—(By The A. P.)—A great blue flag with four white stars that has waved proudly from the masthead when the guns of saluting battle craft reared their tributes to President Harding in the past, will wave bravely before his hearse that carries him today to his tomb. It is the president's flag from the presidential yacht, sent to Marion in the custody of a proud member of the Mayflower's crew that the little company from the ship which marched in Washington as special guard of honor for the dead shall be represented also at the last service for the commander in chief who will sail with them no more.

The flag is no silken banner, but is knit of heavy stuff necessary for the hard service on blue waters. It is larger and heavier than the banners carried by troops ashore and was not made to ride on a staff, but to swing from the reeling masthead of a deep-water ship in all the breezes that might blow.

Firestone, Edison, Ford On Touring Jaunt

MARION, OHIO, August 10.—Throwing aside cares of business, invention and manufacture for a brief while, Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford and H. S. Firestone, will leave Marion late today for their annual camping jaunt over a number of states. The party, together with William F. Anderson, of Cincinnati, resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Ohio who also has been a party member in former years, but who is unable to make the trip this year, came to Marion to attend the funeral of the late President Harding.

Mr. Harding was a member of the party two years ago. Just where the party will go has not been decided. Mr. Ford said, today. The first stop to-night will be at the birthplace of Mr. Edison at Milan, Ohio. The party will sojourn there until, as Mr. Ford said, "the spirit moves them," when they will go on to Mr. Ford's country place near Detroit.

Where the party will go and how long they will remain and when they will break camp is in the hands of "the Commander-in-Chief, Mr. Edison," Mr. Ford said today.

"On this trip we plan to get as far away from modern civilization as possible," Mr. Ford continued. "We are seeking rest and recreation," and as an illustration of recreation Mr. Ford grabbed Mr. Firestone and gave him a jerk which nearly caused him to fall to the floor.

Baggage of the party is carried in two large motor trucks. Individual tents, cooking equipment and all other paraphernalia for such an expedition is carried. The members of the party are traveling in their own automobiles. The party plans to be gone about two weeks.

LOST FIRST CARGO OF ICE

Frederick Tudor Proposed to Ship Ice From Boston to West Indies in 1805.

When twenty-two-year-old Frederick Tudor proposed to ship ice to the West Indies from his father's pond in Saugus, Boston thought him mad, and seafaring men, fearing the cargo would melt and swamp a vessel, with difficulty were persuaded to handle his bid, says "Maritime History of Massachusetts." His first venture was 180 tons of ice to Martinique in 1805. On receiving news of its complete failure, he wrote in his journal: "He who gives back at the first repulse and without striking the second blow, despairs of success, has never been, is not and never will be a hero in love, war or business."

By 1812 Tudor had built up a small trade with the West Indies. The war wiped him out. After the peace of Ghent he obtained government permission to build ice houses at Kingston and Havana, with a monopoly of the trade. It began to pay, and between 1817 and 1820 he extended the business to Charleston, Savannah and New Orleans. Vessels had to be double sheathed to protect the ice from melting, and the capitalists had to be cautioned, with wearisome repetition, never to let the hatches be removed. Tudor experimented with all sorts of dill, with rice and wheat chaff, hay, tarbark and even coal dust, before he settled upon pine sawdust as the best insulator.

HEROISM OF AFRICAN CAT

Missionary Tells How Mother Feline Saved Her Kittens in Fierce Hall Storm.

A missionary to Africa tells this interesting story of the unusual heroism of a cat he once owned. One day a terrific hall storm came, the sort concerning which English and American people know nothing. In a quarter of an hour hall covered the ground to a depth of two feet. Before the storm began the missionary's three cats were outside playing; they were all mother cats and had their kittens with them.

Immediately two of the mother cats ran to shelter, never troubling about the little ones, but the heroine of the story stood her ground. As soon as her master managed to go to her he found that she had gathered not only her own four babies, but all the others as well, nine in all, and had stood over them, keeping them warm and safe, while she was nearly frozen. She had nearly died in saving them, for her poor sides were terribly braced by the heavy hailstones. Carefully did the missionary wrap her in blankets and then he nursed her till she had recovered.

That Happy Day.

There are certain a lot of us and out to owning a motor car, and everyone who has driven a car that was about five years out of date and somewhat wheezy in the engine will appreciate the following:

"I am certainly getting a lot of pleasure out of that old car of mine, now," Brown announced at the office.

"Well, that's news," Curtis commented. "How come?"

"I've sold the old boat!" Brown calmly explained.

BULLETIN

IV.—A Lodge in the Wilderness

"HAI-YAI, so bright a day, so clear!" said Mitlahwe as she entered the big lodge and laid upon a wide, low couch, covered with soft skins, the fur of a grizzly which had fallen to her man's rifle. "HAI-YAI, I wish it would last forever—so sweet!" she added, smoothing the fur lankingly and showing her teeth in a smile.

"There will come a great storm, Mitlahwe. See, the birds go south so soon," responded a deep voice from a corner by the doorway.

The young Indian wife turned quickly, and, in a defiant mood—or was it the inward cry against an impending fate, the tragic future of those who will not see, because to see is to suffer—she made some quaint, odd motions of the body which belonged to a mysterious dance of her tribe, and, with flashing eyes, challenged the comely old woman seated on a pile of deer skins.

"It is morning, and the day will last forever," she said, nonchalantly, but her eyes suddenly took on a far-away look, half apprehensive, half wondering. The birds were indeed going south very soon, yet had there ever been so exquisite an autumn as this had her man ever had? How wonderful a trade her man with the brown hair, blue eyes, and fair, strong face?

"The birds go south, but the hunters and buffalo still go north," Mitlahwe urged, earnestly, looking hard at her mother—Ganta, the Swift Wing.

"My dream said that the winter will be dark and lonely, that the ice will be thick, the snow deep, and that many hearts will be sick because of the black days and the hunger that sickens the heart," answered Swift Wing.

Mitlahwe looked into Swift Wing's dark eyes, and an anger came upon her. "The hearts of cowards will freeze," she rejoined, "and to those that will not see the sun the world will be dark." She added, then suddenly she remembered to whom she was speaking, and a flood of feeling ran through her; for Swift Wing had cherished her like a fledgling in the nest till her young white man came from "down East." Her heart had leaped up at sight of him, and she had turned to him from all the young men of her tribe, waiting in a kind of mist till he, at last, had spoken to her mother, and then one evening, her shawl over her head, she had come along to his lodge.

A thousand times as the four years passed by she had thought how good it was that she had become his wife—the young white man's wife, rather than the wife of Breaking Rock, son of White Buffalo, the chief, who had four hundred horses and a face that would have made winter and snow days for her. Now and then Breaking Rock came and stood before the lodge, a disheveled figure, and stayed there after hours, and once or twice he came when her man was with her; but nothing could be done, for earth and air and space were common to them all, and there was no offense in Breaking Rock gazing at the lodge where Mitlahwe lived. Yet it seemed as though Breaking Rock was waiting—waiting and hoping. That was the impression made upon all who saw him, and even old White Buffalo, the chief, shook his head gloomily when he saw Breaking Rock, his son, staring at the big lodge which was so full of happiness, and so full also of many luxuries never before seen at a trading-post on the Koonsee River. The father of Mitlahwe had been chief, but because his three sons had been killed in battle the chiefs had come to White Buffalo, who was of the same blood and family. There were those who said that Mitlahwe should have been chieftainess; but neither she nor her mother would ever listen to this, and so White Buffalo and the tribe loved Mitlahwe because of her modesty and goodness. She was even more to White Buffalo than Breaking Rock, and the white man, Long Hand, for his woman. Yet behind this gladness of White Buffalo, and that of Swift Wing, and behind the silent watchfulness of Breaking Rock, there was a thought which must ever come when a white man mates with an Indian maid, without priest or preacher, or witness, or book, or bond.

Yet four years had gone, and all the tribe, and all who came and went, half-breeds, traders, and other tribes, remarked how happy was the white man with his Indian wife. They never saw anything but light in the eyes of Mitlahwe, nor did the old women of the tribe who scanned her face as she came and went, and who waited too for what never came—not even after four years.

Mitlahwe had been so happy that she had not really missed what never came; though the desire to have something in her arms which was part of both had flamed up in her veins at times, and made her restless till her man had come home again. Then she had forgotten the unseen for the seen, and was happy that they were alone together—that was the joy of it all, so much alone together; for Swift Wing did not live with them, and like Breaking Rock, she watched her daughter's life, standing afar off, since it was the unwritten law of the tribe that the wife's mother must not cross the path or enter the home of her daughter's husband. But at last Dingan had broken through this custom, and insisted that Swift Wing should be with her daughter when he was away from home, as now on this wonderful autumn morning, when Mitlahwe had been sitting to the sun, to which she prayed for her man and for everlasting days with him.

"HAI-YAI," she said now, with a strange, touching sigh breathing in the words, "you are right, my mother, and a dream is a dream; also, if it be dreamed three times, then is it to be followed, and it is true. You have lived long, and your dreams are of the Sun and the Spirit." She shook a little as she laid her hand on a buckskin coat of her man hanging by the lodge door; then she steadied herself again, and gazed earnestly into her mother's eyes. "Have all your dreams come true, my mother?" she asked, with a hungering heart.

"There was the dream that came out of the dark five times, when your father went against the Crees, and was wounded, and crawled away into the hills, and all our warriors fled—they were but a handful, and the Crees like a young forest on a number! I went with my dream, and found him after many days, and it was after that you were born, my youngest and my last. There was also—her eyes almost closed, and the needle and thread she held lay still in her lap—when two of your brothers were killed in the drive of the buffalo. Did I not see it all in my dream, and follow after them to take them to my heart? And when your sister was carried off was it not my dream which saw the trail, so that we brought her back again to die in peace, her eyes seeing the Lodge whither she was going, open to her, and the Sun, the Father, giving her light and promise—for she had wounded herself to die that the thief who stole her should have her to herself! Behold, my daughter, these dreams have I had, and others; and I have lived long and have seen the bright day break into storm, and the birds flee into the far hills where none could follow, and hunger come, and—"

"HAI-YO, see, the birds flying south," said the girl, with a gesture toward the cloudless sky. "Never since I lived have they gone south so soon." Again she shuddered slightly, then she spoke slowly: "I have dreamed, and I will follow my dream, and I dreamed—she knelt down beside her mother and rested her hands in her mother's lap—"I dreamed that there was a wall of hills dark and heavy and far away, and that whenever my eyes looked at them they burned with tears; and yet I looked and looked, till my heart was like lead in my breast; and I turned from them to the rivers and the plains that I loved. But a voice kept calling to me, 'Come, come! Beyond the hills is a happy land. The trail is hard, and your feet will bleed, but beyond is the happy land.' And I would not go for the voice that spoke, and at last there came an old man in my dream and spoke to me kindly, and said, 'Come with me, and I will show thee the way down the hills to the Lodge where thou shalt find what thou hast lost!'"

"And I said to him, 'I have lost nothing,' and I would not go. Twice I dreamed, and twice the old man came, and three times I dreamed it; and then I spoke angrily to him, and but now I did to thee; and behold he changed before my eyes, and I saw that he was now become—she stopped short, and buried her face in her hands for a moment, then recovered herself. "Breaking Rock it was I saw before me, and I cried out and fled. Then I waked with a cry, but my man was beside me, and his arm was round my neck; and this dream, is it not a foolish dream, my mother?"

"Breaking Rock," she said, in alarm, and got to her feet quickly. Breaking Rock stood for a moment looking toward the lodge, then came slowly forward to them. Never in all the four years had he approached this lodge of Mitlahwe, who, the daughter of a chief, should have married himself, the son of a chief! Slowly, but with long, slouching stride, Breaking Rock came nearer. The two women watched him with out speaking. Instinctively they knew that he brought news, that something had happened; yet Mitlahwe felt at her belt for what no Indian girl would be without; and this one was a gift from her man on the anniversary of the day she first came to his lodge.

Breaking Rock was at the door now, his head fixed on Mitlahwe, his figure jerked to its full height, which made him, even then, two inches less than Long Hand. He spoke in a loud voice:

"The last boat this year goes down the river tomorrow. Long Hand, your man, is going to his people. He will not come back. He has had enough of the blackfoot woman. You will see him no more." He waved a hand to the sky. "The birds are going south. A hard winter is coming quick. You will be alone. Breaking Rock is rich. He has five hundred horses. Your man is going to his own people. Let him go. He is no man. It is four years, and still there are but two in your lodge. How!"

He swung on his heel with a chuckle in his throat, for he thought he had said a good thing, and that in truth he was worth twenty white men. His quick ear caught a movement behind him, however, and he saw the girl spring from the lodge door, something flashing from her belt. But now the mother's arms were round her, with cries of protest, and Breaking Rock, with another laugh, slipped away softly toward the river.

"That is good," he muttered. "She will kill him, perhaps, when he goes to him. She will go, but he will not stay. I have heard."

As he disappeared among the trees, Mitlahwe disengaged herself from her mother's arms, went slowly back into the lodge, and sat down on the great couch where for so many moons she had lain with her man beside her.

Her mother watched her closely, though she moved about doing little things. She was trying to think of what she would have done if such a thing had happened to her, if her man had been going to leave her. She assumed that Dingan would leave Mitlahwe, for he would hear the voices of his people calling far away, even as the red man who went East into the great cities heard the prairies and the mountains and the river and his own people calling, and came back, and put off the clothes of civilization, and donned his buckskins again, and sat in the Medicine Man's tent, and heard the spirits speak to him through the mist and smoke of the sacred fire.

When Swift Wing first gave her daughter to the white man she foresaw the danger now at hand, but this was the tribute of the lower race to the higher, and—who could tell? While men had left their Indian wives, but had come back again, and forever renounced the life of their own nations, and become great chiefs, teaching useful things to their adopted people, bringing up their children as tribesmen—bringing up the thing which called them back, the bright-eyed children, with the color of the brown prairie in their faces, and their brains so sharp and strong. But here was no child to call Dingan back, only the eloquent, brave, sweet face of Mitlahwe. If he went! Would he go? Was he going? And that he would go, what would she do? In her belt—but, no, that would be worse than all, and she would lose Mitlahwe, her last child, as she had lost so many others. What would she herself do if she were in Mitlahwe's place? Ah, she would make him stay somehow—by truth or by falsehood! by the whispered story in the night; by her head upon his knee before the lodge fire, and her eyes fixed on his, turing deringly. "What is it, Mitlahwe?" she asked.

"It is good-luck. So my man has said. It is the way of his people. If it is put over the door, and if a dream come it is a good dream; and if a bad thing come, it will not enter; and if the heart prays for a thing hid from all the world, then it brings good-luck. HAI-YAI! I will put it over the door, and then—"

All at once her hand dropped to her side, as though some terrible thought had come to her, and, sinking to the floor, she rocked her body backward and forward for a time, sobbing. But presently she got to her feet again, and, going to the door of the lodge, fastened the horseshoe over it with a great needle and a string of buckskin.

"O great Sun," she prayed, "have pity on me and save me. I cannot live alone. I am only a Blackfoot wife; I am not blood of his blood, O great One, blood of his blood, that he will say, 'This is mine, body of my body,' and he will hear the cry and will stay. O great Sun, pity me!"

The old woman's heart beat faster as she listened. The same thought was in the mind of both. If there were but a child, bone of his bone, he would not leave her; or, if he went, then surely he would return when he heard his popoose calling in the lodge in the wilderness.

As Mitlahwe turned to her, a strange burning light in her eyes, Swift Wing said: "It is good. The white man's Medicine for a white man's wife. But if there were the red man's Medicine too—"

"What is the red man's Medicine?" asked the young wife, as she smoothed her hair, put a string of bead beads around her neck, and wound a red sash round her waist.

The old woman shook her head, a curious, half-mystic light in her eyes, her body drawn up to its full height, as though waiting for something. "It is an old Medicine. It is of win-post, where her man traded with the Indians, and lay in a stock of home-felings before you settle down at Groise for good. They was fair when I put it to them that you tell mebbe want to do that. 'You tell Dingan,' they said, 'that he can have the month glad and grateful, and a free ticket on the railway back and forth. He can have it at once,' they said."

"The game is with you, Dingan. All the cards are in your hands. You'll never get such another chance, again; and you're only thirty," said the captain.

"I wish they'd ask me," said Dingan's partner, with a sigh, as he looked at Labache. "I want my chance bad, though we've done well here—good gosh, yes, all through Dingan."

"The winters, they go queer in Groise," said Labache. "It is all the time, trade all the time, plenty to do and see—and a bon fortune to make, bagosh!"

"Your old home was in Nova Scotia, wasn't it, Dingan?" asked the captain, in a low voice. "I ken from Connecticut, and I was East to my village last year. It was good, seein' all my old friends again; but I ken back content, I ken back full of home-feelin' and content. You'll like the trip, Dingan. It'll do you good."

Dingan drew himself up with a start. "All right, I guess I'll do it. Let's figure up again," he said to his partner, with a reckless air.

With a smothered cry Mitlahwe turned and fled into the darkness, and back to the lodge. The lodge was empty. She threw herself upon the great couch in an agony of despair.

A half-hour went by. Then she rose, and began to prepare supper. Her face was ashen, her manner was determined, and once or twice her hand went to her belt, as though to assure herself of something.

Never had the lodge looked so bright and cheerful; never had she prepared so appetizing a supper: the side of the great couch seemed so soft and rich with furs, so homelike and so inviting after a long day's work. Never had Mitlahwe seemed so good to look at, so graceful and alert and refined—suffering does its work even in the wild woods, with "wild people." Never had the lodge such an air of welcome and peace as home as tonight; and so Dingan thought as he drew aside the wide curtains of deerskin and entered.

Mitlahwe was bending over the fire, and appeared not to hear him.

"Mitlahwe," he said, gently.

She was singing to herself, to an Indian air, the words of a song Dingan had taught her:

"Open the door; cold is the night, and my feet are heavy. Heap up the fire, scatter upon it the cones and the scented leaves; Spread the soft robe on the couch for the chief that returns. Bring forth the cup of remembrance—"

It was like a low recitation, and it had a plaintive cadence, as of a dove that mourned.

"Mitlahwe," he said, in a louder voice, but with a break in it, too; for it all rushed upon him, all that she had been to him—all that had made the great West glow with life, made the air sweeter, the grass greener, the trees more companionable and human; who it was that had given the waste places a voice. Yet—yet, there were his own people in the East, there was another life waiting for him, there was the life of ambition and wealth, and, and home—and children.

His eyes were misty as she turned to him with a little cry of surprise, how much natural and how much assumed—for she had heard him enter—it would have been hard to say. She was a woman, and therefore the daughter of pretence even when most real. He caught her by both arms as she shyly but eagerly came to him. "Good girl, good little girl," he said. He looked round him.

"Well, I've never seen our lodge look like this to-night, and the smell of the pine-cones, and the cedar-boughs, and the skins, and—"

"And everything," she said, with a queer little laugh, as she moved away again to turn the stakes on the fire.

Everything! He started at the word. It was so strange that she should use it by accident, when but a little while ago he had been ready to choke the wind out of a man's body for using it concerning herself.

Herself—to leave her here, who had been so much to him? As true as the sun she worshipped, her eyes had never lingered on another man since she came to his lodge; and, to her mind, she was as truly sacredly and priests had spoken, of a thousand Medicine Men had made their incantations. She was his woman and he was her man. As he chatted to her, telling her of much that he had done that day, and wondering how he could tell her of all he had done, he kept looking round the lodge, his eye resting on this or that, and everything had his own personal history had become part of their lodge life, because it had a use as between him and her, and not a conventional domestic place. Every skin, every utensil, every pitcher and bowl and pot and curtain had been with them at one time or another when it became of importance and renowned in the story of their days and deeds.

How could he break it to her—that he was going to visit his own people, and that she must be alone with her mother all winter, to await his return in the spring? His return? As he watched her sitting beside him, helping him to his favorite dish, the close, companionable trust and gentleness of her, her exquisite cleanliness and grace in his eyes, he asked himself if, after all, it was not true that he would return in the spring. The years had passed without his seriously thinking of this inevitable day. He had put it off and off, content to live each hour as it came and take no real thought for the future; and yet, behind all was the warning fact that he must go one day, and that Mitlahwe could not go with him. Her mother must have known that when she let Mitlahwe come to him. Of course; and, after all, she would find another mate, a better mate, one of her own people.

But her hand was in his now, and it was small and very warm, and suddenly he shook with anger at the thought of one like Breaking Rock taking her to his wigwam; or Labache—this roused him to an inward fury; and Mitlahwe saw and guessed the struggle that was going on in him, and she leaned her head against his shoulder, and once she raised his hand to her lips, and said, "My chief!"

Then his face cleared again, and he got him his pipe and filled it, and he took a light to it; and, as the smoke curled up, and he leaned back contentedly in the moment, she went to the door, drew open the curtains, and, stepping outside, raised her eyes to the horizon. Then she said softly to the sky: "O Sun, great Father, have pity on me, for I love him, and would keep him. And give me bone of his bone, and one to nurse at my breast that is of him. O Sun, pity me this night, and be near me when I speak to him, and hear what I say."

"What are you doing out there, Mitlahwe?" Dingan cried; and when she entered again he beckoned her to him. "What was it you were saying? 'Who were you speaking to?'" he asked. "I heard your voice."

"I was thanking the Sun for his goodness to me. I was speaking for the thing that is in my heart, that is life of my life," she added, vaguely.

"Well, I have something to say to you, little girl," he said, with an effort.

She remained erect before him, waiting for the blow—outwardly calm, inwardly crying out in pain. "Do you think you could stand a little parting?" he asked, reaching out and touching her shoulder.

"I have been alone before—for five days," she answered, quietly.

"But it must be longer this time." "How long?" she asked, with eyes fixed on his. "If it is more than a week, I will go too."

"It is longer than a month," he said.

"Then I will go." "I am going to see my people," he faltered.

"By the Sun, Anne?" He nodded. "It is the last chance this year; but I will come back—in the spring."

As he said it he saw her shrink, and his heart smote him. Four years such as few men ever spent, and all the luck had been his, and he was to go! "West and got into his bones!" The quiet, starchy night, the wonderful days, the hunt, the long journeys, the life free of care, and the warm lodge; and, here, the great couch—ah, the cheek pressed to his, the lips that whispered at his ear, the smooth arm round his neck. It all rushed upon him now. His people! His people in the East, who had thwarted his youth, yoked and cramped him, saw only evil in his widening desires, and threw him over when he came out West—the scallywag, they called him, who had never wronged a man or a woman? Never—wronged—a woman? The question sprang to his lips now. Suddenly he saw it all in a new light. White or brown or red, this heart and soul and body before him were all his, sacred to him; he was in very truth her chief.

Untutored as she was, she read him, felt what was going on in him. She saw the tears spring to his eyes. Then, coming close to him, she said, softly, slowly: "I must go with you, where you go. Oh, hai-yai, my chief, shall we go from here. Here in this lodge will thou be with thine own people—thine own, thou and I—and thine to come." The great passion in her heart made the lie seem very truth.

With a cry he got to his feet, and stood staring at her for a moment, scarcely comprehending, then suddenly he clasped her in his arms. "Mitlahwe—Mitlahwe, oh, my little girl!" he cried. "You and me—and our own—our own people!"

Kissing her, he drew her down beside him on the couch. "Tell me again—is it so at last?" he said, and she whispered in his ear once more.

In the middle of the night he said to her, "Some day, perhaps, we will go East—some day, perhaps."

"Not now—not if I know it," he answered. "I've got my heart nailed to the door of this lodge."

As he slept she got quietly out, and, going to the door of the lodge, reached up a hand and touched the horseshoe.

"Be good, Medicine to me," she said. Then she prayed, "O Sun, pity me, that it may be as I have said to him. Oh, pity me, great Father!"

In the days to come Swift Wing said that it was her Medicine—when her hand was burned to the wrist in the dark ritual she had performed with the Medicine Man—the night that Mitlahwe fought for her man; but Mitlahwe said it was her Medicine, the horseshoe, which brought one of Dingan's own people to the lodge—a little girl with Mitlahwe's eyes and form and her father's face. Truth has many mysteries, and the faith of the woman was great; and so it was that, to the long end, Mitlahwe kept her man. But truly she was altogether a woman, and had good fortune.

O great Sun, have pity on me and save me. I cannot live alone. I am only a Blackfoot wife; I am not blood of his blood, O great One, blood of his blood, that he will say, 'This is mine, body of my body,' and he will hear the cry and will stay. O great Sun, pity me!"

ters ago as many as the hairs of the head. I have forgotten almost, but I take the Medicine when there were no white men in the land. And so it was that to every woman's breast there hung a popoose, and every woman had her man, and the red men were like leaves in the forest—but it was a winter of winters that crowded round his knees, and the old Harvesters of the Years reaping them so fast, till the children stood up as tall as their father and chief. That was long ago, and she had had her share—twenty-five years of happiness; but Mitlahwe had had only four. She looked at Mitlahwe, standing still for a moment like one petrified, then suddenly she gave a little cry. Something had come into her mind, some solution of the problem, and she ran and stooped over the girl and put both hands on her head.

"Mitlahwe, heart's blood of mine," she said, "the birds go south, but they return. What matter if they go so soon, if they return soon? If the Sun wills that the winter be dark, and he sends the Coldmaker to close the rivers and drive the wild ones far from the arrow and the gun, yet summer—has it not been so, and the Coldmaker has hurried away—away! The birds go south, but they will return, Mitlahwe."

"I heard a cry in the night while my man slept," Mitlahwe answered, looking straight before her, "and it was like the cry of a bird—calling, calling."

"But he did not hear—he was asleep beside Mitlahwe. If he did wake, surely it was good luck. Thy breath upon his face kept him still, so then still Mitlahwe shall whisper, and tell him."

"HAI-YO—hush," said the girl, and trembled a little, and put both hands on her mother's mouth.

For a moment she stood so, then with an exclamation suddenly turned and ran through the doorway, and sped toward the river, and into the path which would take her to the

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Captain John Hewitt is Commissioner of Police at Fessleton, British North Borneo. His beautiful sister, Monica Viner, is engaged to marry Peter Pennington, detective. Pennington is detailed by the government to apprehend Chai-Hung, leader of the Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits. Pennington goes to visit James Varney in his bungalow at the head of the Tembak River. Varney receives a threatening message from The Yellow Seven. Pennington warns Varney to be careful.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Pennington produced a rubber pouch and began rolling a cigarette. "I don't know what to think. All I can say is that, by every rule of the game, the arch-bandit ought to be dead."

"I rather gather," said Varney slowly, "that Chai-Hung is a little out of the ordinary."

Pennington clasped both hands over his knee and looked hard at the wall.

"He is," he admitted. "There's something horribly uncanny about the merchant, and I only hope the Commissioner realizes it as much as I do."

"How long a time would you consider sufficient to presume him dead?"

Pennington grinned.

"Not long," he announced more cheerfully. "You see, Chai-Hung—to give the devil his due—has a decided sense of humor; not the refined, harmless article that you or I are claim to, I admit, but still a sense of humor! I flatter myself that I know enough of the gentleman to be certain that he won't be able to resist for long the desire to let me know that he's eluded me."

Varney lifted the siphon from the table and thoughtfully sprayed a large spider that was in the act of crossing the floor.

"By the bye," he said, "you didn't by any chance tell anybody you were coming here?"

"Good heavens, yes! I told Monica and the others by probable plans, for one thing; and, for another, I instructed my men to follow me on here if they wanted anything or gleaned anything of importance they thought I ought to know."

"That accounts for it!"

"Accounts for what?"

"The trader dived a hand into his tunic and produced Hewitt's letter folded round the piece of card."

given to my servant, verbally, to the effect that if I admitted you or helped you in any way—my number was up!"

Pennington's jaw dropped.

"Have you any idea where your boy put my things?"

Varney took his guest by both shoulders and forced him back into the chair.

"Whatever damage there's likely to be is done already, and if you fancy I'm going to allow a pack of dirty thieves to dictate to me what guests I entertain—you're very much mistaken. I merely told you as a matter of interest," Chai-Hung, it appears, is at large."

"Very much so! My dear old Varney, what an unholly mess-up! Do you realize that every blessed Chinaman on the island belongs to that gang of cut-throats?"

"Actively?"

"Either that or passively. That's exactly where Chai-Hung's strength lies. However loyal an Oriental may be to his white master, he daren't refuse to comply with any request the bandit may make. He wouldn't live a week if he did."

As the trader reached over to take his glass, Pennington caught sight of the tattooed tiger.

"I know one man, at least, who'd mourn your loss if Chai-Hung carried out his threat," he said quietly.

"And that is—"

"Zara-Khan. He'd lament the loss of both a generous client and a walking picture gallery of his art."

At that moment Chong-Hee appeared at the doorway to announce that the baths were ready.

The rusted hands of the veranda clock pointed to a little after one when Varney stretched his tattooed arms and yawned.

"Time for bed, old son."

Pennington, who was leaning on the rail, glanced back over his shoulder.

"Dread?"

The other nodded.

"Taken all round, it's been a rather trying day. You won't be in too much of a hurry to get away in the morning?"

"Can't say. It depends on circumstances—and Mr. Chai-Hung. You won't mind if I hang about here for a spell. I know where to find my room."

Varney smiled.

"I tried many different remedies but they all failed. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some and after using them I got relief. I continued using them and now I am completely healed." (Signed) Miss Alice Bateman, 4140 Storrs Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

chair jerked up its head. Presently Pennington extinguished the lamp.

As he came back to his original position a sudden sound attracted his attention. The moon, sailing gaily toward a cloud-bank, threw sufficient light to enable him to see that Varney's dog had not stirred.

The sound came again, this time from the patch of blackness that indicated the opening to the passage. Pennington loosened the button of his hip-pocket and walked deliberately toward the patch. His keen ear, accustomed to the slightest noise, all his senses alert, he gathered that someone was retreating softly as he advanced.

He stepped a couple of paces backward and looked at the dog.

The animal blinked friendly up at him, squirmed into a more comfortable position—and resumed his slumbers.

Pennington winked ominously at the night. In the chamber he had just made, and strode whistling to his room. He closed the door carefully after him and turned the key. Presently he was moving about the room, humming softly to himself, with a hurricane-lamp burning merrily on a table by the bed.

To a chance listener, it would have appeared that "he who sees in the dark" had at last succumbed to fatigue and was in the act of undressing; but in reality Pennington was indulging in the amusing pastime of picking perfectly useless things up in one part of the room and putting them down in another. He removed his boots and knocking out the light, stretched himself at full length in his clothes behind the mosquito-curtains.

Varney's spare room contained no window, obtaining its ventilation from the space between where the partition walls touched and the rafters began, and Pennington, tying the curtains at the head end of the bed in a knot behind him, focused his eyes upon a narrow lattice that served to finish off the rough edges of timbering of the wall immediately at his side. This was the wall dividing his room from the passage.

There were two outer partitions that rose higher than the rest, and the fourth was the one that backed on the room in which the trader himself was sleeping.

He had been in that position for roughly half an hour when he knew rather than heard that something was moving stealthily about the building. Presently the movement ceased altogether, and the man on the bed caught the sound of measured breathing that seemed to come from somewhere else at his side.

Something passed softly along the wood-work, strained upon it, scratched its surface faintly—and the breathing sounded more rapidly in the region of the roof.

Most things are a question of habit. Happenings such as these—which might have held others helpless, paralyzed with fear—acted upon Chinese Pennington like a tonic. According, while a black shadow—the slightest degree blacker than the wall itself—slid slowly downward, Pennington did not trouble to move a muscle until its lower extremity came well within reach. And then—one arm shot out with surprising suddenness, his fingers fastened upon a brown ankle—and the over of the limb collapsed in a heap on the floor.

"Chong-Hee," said Pennington softly, "I have been waiting for you for many hours!"

He had slipped from the bed and was groping for the electric torch he habitually carried. The form over which he knelt moved convulsively and flattened out, nearly causing him to pitch forward on to his face. Pennington found the torch. The bulb displayed a faint glimmer which dropped immediately into a dull, red glow. He swore softly under his breath and shifting his knees until they rested upon either arm of the Oriental, struck a match.

A second later he was upon his feet turning up the chimney of the hurricane lamp. The flame flickered and shot up and he snaped the glass back into place.

Chong-Hee lay spreadeagled on the wooden floor—an inch of steel point protruding upward between his shoulder-blades, impaled upon the knife with which he had thought to destroy the enemy of the Yellow Seven!

"Hello!" came the sleepy voice of the trader from the other side of the partition. "The gas pen?"

Pennington unlocked the door. (Continued in Our Next Issue)

Must Fight New Wheat Smut

Washington Press Service
505 Albee Bldg., Washington, D. C.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10—(Special)—A call to arms for a fight against flag smut of wheat was sent out today by the United States Department of Agriculture. This comparatively new pest invaded Illinois wheat fields in 1919 and since then the infested area has been gradually enlarged.

The indication is that it may become a serious disease in Ohio unless adequate control measures are put into effect, declare experts of the Department of Agriculture.

Flag smut appears as black stripes running lengthwise in the leaf and sheaths of the wheat plant, which become twisted and rarely produce a head. No difficulty is experienced in identifying the disease, say the federal authorities. Infested plants are usually more or less dwarfed.

The disease may be held in check and reduced in quantity by judicious quarantine measures, seed treatment, crop rotation and other sanitary measures. But the most effective method of combatting it, declare the experts here, is by growing resistant varieties of wheat. Through experiments a number of varieties have been found which are highly resistant to or possibly immune from smut.

It is the hope of the federal authorities that the use of these resistant varieties, kept free from susceptible mixtures, will finally eradicate the disease and thus remove one of many worries with which the Ohio wheat grower is constantly contending.

The most dangerous parasites, according to federal experts, are those that have been imported from other countries. They are spreading rapidly and doing much damage principally because the natural enemies of the alien invaders are not present. Some of the importations are not susceptible to poisons, and it is necessary, the experts declare, to combat them with seeds that are particularly or wholly immunized from attack.

WHY QUESTION ME?

A would-be politician stopped me the other day and asked me where I stood on the wet and dry proposition and what I thought about—chances of getting the nomination. I told him I'd think it over and tell him in my ad.—so here goes. I'm an American, paying member of church, lodge and several other things, pay taxes, all my debts, smoke, play whist and go to bed at eleven o'clock—some nights. BUT I don't tell the powers that be to stop gambling in the city and bet weekly on the races, nor do I have a friend of mine buy me bootleg whiskey and cash my checks so people won't find it out, but I am selling as good shoes as any one at living profit prices. Men, those seven-fifty oxfords are real.

P. S.—If—does get the nomination the party will knife him.

BRAVES OPEN CINCY SERIES WITH A 1 TO 0 VICTORY; SOUTHWORTH'S HITTING FEATURE

Two Timely Bingles
Win Hard Fought
Battle For Visitors

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 10.—Genevich pitched brilliantly for Boston yesterday, shutting out Cincinnati 1 to 0. Rixey was effective, except in the seventh inning when Southworth's triple and a single by McInnis gave the Braves their only run. Both teams fielded with great speed. It was the sixth straight defeat for the Reds and the first victory of the season for the Braves at Redland Field. How the game was played:

First Inning
Felix lined to Caveney. Powell breezed. Southworth beat out one to short, but was soon expunged. Hargrave to Caveney. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Inning
Burns popped to Daubert. O'Neill popped to Burns. Genevich was out. Rixey to Bohne to Daubert. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Third Inning
R. Smith popped to Daubert. O'Neill popped to Burns. Genevich was out. Rixey to Bohne to Daubert. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning
Felix whiffed. Rixey checked out. Powell, Southworth popped to Duncan. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fifth Inning
McInnis singled over short. Boeckel sailed to Burns. As Ford faired, Hargrave's peg to Bohne nailed McInnis. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Inning
R. Smith popped to Daubert. O'Neill expired, Rixey to Daubert—a dash of a play by Caveney. Genevich doubled to left. Felix fouled to Hargrave. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning
Powell out. Daubert to Rixey. Southworth tripled to the left wall. McInnis singled to center, scoring Southworth. Boeckel singled to center. Ford forced Daubert. Caveney stral. McInnis was nailed. Hargrave to Bohne to Hargrave. One run, three hits, no errors.

Score by Innings:
Boston..... 000 000 100-1
Cincinnati..... 000 000 000-0

Two base hits—Hargrave, Genevich.
Three base hits—Southworth 2.
Sacrifice hit—Caveney.

Double plays—Bohne to Daubert; Hargrave to Bohne; Smith to Ford to McInnis.

First base on balls—Off Genevich 2.
Struck out—By Rixey 3, by Genevich 3.

Hits—Off Rixey 7 in eight innings; off Genevich one in one inning.
Losing pitcher—Rixey.

A GOOD RECORD
When Stanley Harris of the Washington team had to lay off on July 15, he ended a record of 278 games without a miss. Of course that doesn't look so many compared to Everett Scott's eleven hundred or so, but it's quite a record for continuous services at that. The lay off of Harris was occasioned by a spike wound suffered at Detroit.

A MASTER'S OPINION

From The Fourth Estate

JOHN WANAMAKER through his life was one of the most consistent newspaper advertisers in this country. With him, advertising was one of the most important integral parts of the great mercantile house which he built. It was common knowledge that while he might take a vacation from every other business activity, he never took a vacation from his advertising department for an extended period. He might be resting in Florida but he always found time to keep in telegraphic touch with that part of his great organization. Wanamaker was not only a great advertiser but a student of advertising.

It was for that reason that one of his last messages on the subject given to Gordon H. Cilley, advertising manager of his Philadelphia store, shortly before his death, deserves the serious consideration of newspaper publishers and department store owners. In telling of this conversation near the close of the life of the great merchant, Mr. Cilley speaking before the Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia, said:

"He described newspaper advertising and said it was in a bad way. The people, he said, were beginning to resent the extraordinary volume of advertising that appears in the daily papers. They resented the extravagance of the copy and the voluminous unhandy bundle that the average newspaper had become. They were tired of big flaming type headlines that meant nothing.

"If the newspapers are going to save themselves and be useful to the public and useful to the merchant who advertises in them," he said, "they will be able to reduce faithful advertising to its proper proportions and cut out the waste and false advertising altogether."

Continuing his address, Mr. Cilley said:
"If it could be carried into effect, what would happen? Newspapers would come to a new dignity and a new usefulness. There would be room in the newspapers for news of the world and better and higher employment for the men who cover the news, write it and edit it."

At another place he said:
"Those of us who have been buying space for a good many years know that the magazines certainly charge twice too much for their space, but I believe that the newspapers charge too little to maintain themselves in their proper sphere."

Remember this was not the advertising manager of a newspaper speaking, but instead the advertising manager of the largest retail store buyer of newspaper white space in the world.

Every student of advertising knows that the present scale of newspaper advertising rates is economically unsound and that it must go up rapidly and materially. The forests of the world cannot stand the present waste much longer.

The threatened Canadian embargo on pulp wood is one of the certain straws that shows which way the wind is blowing.

THE MARVEL OF GOVERNMENT

TODAY they lay away all that is mortal of Warren G. Harding, until nine days ago president of these United States. Tomorrow Calvin Coolidge, his successor, returning from the funeral, takes upon himself fully and openly all his duties and responsibilities. There was and will be no pomp and circumstance to mark the change. Neither will there be disorder and confusion, not so much as uneasiness. The government will continue its uninterrupted course.

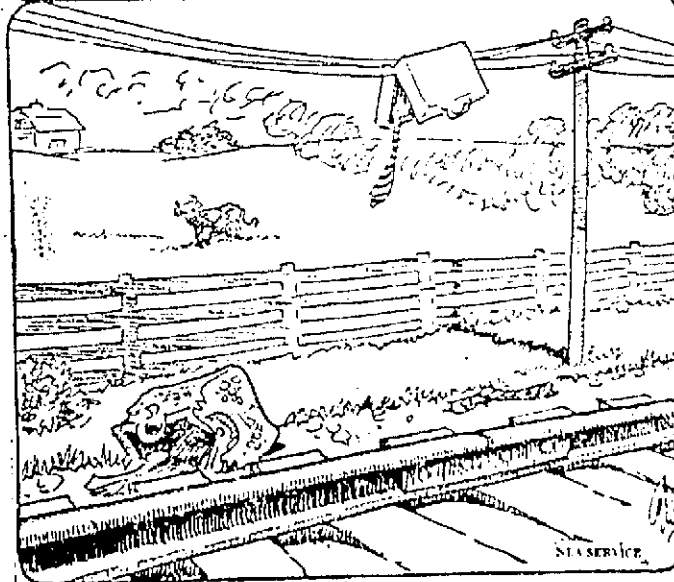

When you come to think of it that is a marvelous thing. In itself and in a way, the change will mark a mighty change in the policy and processes of the administration, but it will in no wise disturb the government itself.

There isn't another nation in the world where such a process could be accomplished and the people accept it with such utter unconcern. Nothing could prove more conclusively that our system, with all its faults, which are not of the system, but of our selves, the people that our government, is founded on the best and wisest of principles, co-ordinated and operated in the best form.

There is a great outcry that the duties and functions of the president be considerably reduced. That's all well enough to talk about, but tomorrow when the great American industry of politics and seeking office renews business it will come to naught and be forgot.

EVERETT TRUE

BY CONDO

New York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK, August 10—Thoughts while strolling around New York: Gold starred mothers watching military parade. In dry-eyed anguish. There's George Randolph Chester. A sky-writing air pilot mispicks a word. Loose-lipped vegetable hucksters. Heavy luncheon sluggards. Frankish collegians. Sis-boom-ah! A wild scream from a careening taxi. A low-headed urchin parked on a cove of ice. A quick drenching shower and the sun pops out. Goody, goody! What has become of the flapper rage?

A wax works dime museum. With pythons in the window. Wonder what a python thinks about. The cosmopolitan savoir-faire—a dandy in white gloves with pink ribbing. A wriggling cross section of town where my dog and I used to stroll. How I miss him!

A Polish quarter. Prayer rugs sold from a careening taxi. Where only rich children are allowed to play. The flaming Jolson Cross. Hotel "Intons" parading with dogs. I like the jaunty caps with chili straps. Mark Twain's old home.

The only traffic cop in town with whiskers. Three Chinese children in a pony cart. Fireman washing off the statues in Madison Square. Scholarly prophecies in discussion under shade trees. Hokey-pokey men. Toothless old woman who sit and stare.

Blocks of gilded cloak and suit signs. A letter carrier who carries a cane swinging on his arm. Maybe it is slumped and addressed: Bathing, flocking to the Garden pool. The old Twenty-Eighth Street Absolutie House. Now selling samovars and brass knuckles.

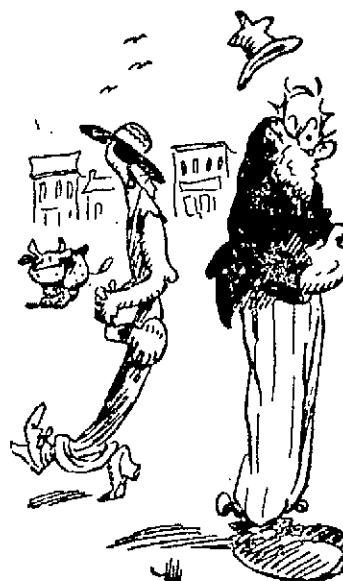

There's a laugh. A little man with a fur-edged bowler hat. Melting asphalt. O, for the snows of St. Moritz. I've never been there, but it sounds traveled.

Charlie Somerville, raconteur, author and long a chronicler of Broadway for the world, has become a Thespian. He is to take part in an Equity production. He says, as he gathers it, he is to essay the role of a "gum disease" for his character.

Mr. Somerville knew more of the ups and downs of the struts of the White Way than any other boulevardier. Then one day he left it flat and retired to a quiet apartment on the East Side to write fiction. Now the lights call again.

A man named Ernest Boyd went to his bank in New York one day recently and discovered a mysterious deposit to his credit. He refused to touch it, despite the fact that the bank insisted it was his. The directors said it could not be otherwise.

for the bank does not take two depositors with the same name. He was being persuaded to accept it when the bank found the money had really been deposited by the Ernest Boyd Company. Now Boyd says when he goes into the bank the clerks whisper: "There is the boob who gave up $14,000."

Fifth Avenue was jammed about nine o'clock the other evening. At that hour it is usually deserted. But three young men were bounding on the door of an office building. They found they were locked in. Police-men came and so did firemen and crowds from all directions. The night janitor did not come on duty until midnight. The doors were so heavy the voices of the prisoners could not be heard. Finally they slipped penciled messages under the door and each had a telephone number.

"For Heaven's sake telephone our wires," the messages read. They will never believe this story." (Copyright 1923, By The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

He Learned About Women

He meets her twice or thrice a year. Sometimes less and sometimes more. Each time they meet the stage is set. Exactly as the time before. He is most glossy and most gay. Witty, omniscient and bland; She is inscrutable and mild. She lets him play his hand.

And if his pyrotechnics pale, A little on her moonlight sky, He scarcely knows that it is so. And only vaguely wonder why. And if he finds her eyes too wide, A shade too deep, a shade too cool, She lets him wonder which she is, A saint, a sinner or a fool.—Lilo.

Wanted Story With a Purpose

Billy had fallen and hurt himself and I called him to me saying, "Don't cry, Billy. Come here, and I'll tell you a story." He stopped sobbing, and came.

"Tell me what kind of a story you want," I said.

"Well," he said with a sigh, "tell me one that will make my folks glad again."—Exchange.

"Yes," said a weak little man in the back seat, "next Saturday night!"—Pearson's Weekly (London).

Got Wrong Hint
For a long time the restaurant man had out a sign, "Home Looking."

"Then he removed it." "I see," remarked a customer, "that the old sign is gone."

"Yes, I took it down." "But why?"

"Well, I came to the conclusion that it was doing the place no good. I got to watching pedestrians. A great many would take a squint at that sign and then hurry on."—From the Associated Newspapers.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

ON THE HORIZON

BY BERTON BRALEY

LOOKING against the distant rim
A ship, with all her sails in trim,
Is vanishing into the blue,
Seeking far ports I shall not view.

PURCHASE her sails are soiled and frayed,
Her decks with coal-dust overlaid,
But seen afar across the sea,
She is a Ship of Dreams to me.

AND if her cargo have the scent
Of spices of the Orient,
Or reek of gunno and of ludes,
In know not, but I know she rides

ON rolling deeps that I would cross
And that about her bows there
Bright showers of the salty spray,
And that her mast-heads swing and sway;

AND that I'd almost sell my soul
To feel her decks beneath me roll,
And hear her timbers strain and creak,
And sense the salt wind on my cheek.

THINK there is no lovelier sight,
Vouchsafed to give the eyes delight,
Than is a ship, with sails atrim,
Against the far horizon's rim.

Ohio Fifth In Wool Growing

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10.

Ohio, with an estimated production of 14,130,000 pounds, is given fifth place among wool-growing states in the semi-annual forecast of the United States Department of Agriculture, issued today.

Texas, with a production of 19,700,000 pounds, is the banner state. Wyoming, Montana, Utah and Idaho follow, in the order named.

The wool clip for the year is placed at 229,031,000 pounds, which is about 8,000,000 pounds in excess of the 1922 output and 5,000,000 pounds in excess of 1921, but 7,000,000 pounds under the production of 1920.
